Marshal Slain, Physician Critically Hurt in Flight of Criminal.

FLEES TO INDIANA

Toledoan Kidnaped and Forced To Aid Escape; Two Brothers Caught.

By The Associated Press

TOLEDO O July 9—Hunted for a wild orgy of crime including one murder James Storey alias Wilson of St Paul Minn a dangerous member of a holdup gang of three brothers forced a Toledo man and the latter's nine-year old son to drive him by auto late last night to South Bend Ind where he released them and disappeared.

Earlier in the evening Storey shot and critically wounded Dr Martin Larkin 34 prominent Toledo physician while police were seeking the gunman for the slaying of Marshal Jay Davis of North Baltimore O.

After firing a bullet into Dr Larkin's jaw and another into his thigh Storey reappeared at the residence of John Hova another Toledoan The holdup man then forced Hova and the latter's son William to aid his escape.

Early today Hova telephoned home from South Bend that he and the boy had just been released unharmed.

Slain in Battle

Marshal Davis was slain late yesterday when he engaged in a gun battle with James Storey and his brother Bert 19 also of St Paul Bert who probably was fatally wounded at first told police his companion was James Wilson of New York but later identified him as his brother.

The marshal had been seeking the pair for a holdup and three kidnapings which they and another man committed Thursday.

Determined not to be captured the two Storeys began firing on the marshal almost as soon as he accosted them Davis a World war veteran received six bullet wounds in the exchange but never stopped returning the fire until his own gun was empty Then with a bullet through his heart he fell dead.

Bert Storey collapsed a moment later but his brother seemingly uninjured ran into the street and at the point of his revolver took possession of an automobile containing three boys and forced them to drive him to Toledo They were Francis Bonner 15 Robert Moore 17 and his brother Carl Moore 22.

Hotly pursued by a posse of citizens Storey jumped from the car in the outskirts of Toledo and momentarily disappeared.

Then while police were scouring the city for him the gunman suddenly reappeared in the fashionable West end section jumped on the running board of Dr Larkin's automobile fired two shots and again escaped when citizens came running to the rescue.

Dr Larkin who is the medical director of Mercy hospital was given a blood transfusion at the hospital where witnesses of the shooting took him and fellow physicians said he had a chance to recover.

Gunman Identified

Police identified James Storey as the director's assailant and as the kidnaper of Hova by the description furnished by the kidnaped young men who brought him here.

The holdup for which Marshal Davis was hunting the gunman was committed Thursday by James and Bert Storey and a youth who gave his name as Manley Gorman 17 but afterward admitted police said that he was the third of the Storey brothers.

Earlier that day the trio kidnaped Don Drake 38 a Toledo automobile salesman and forced him to drive them to Bowling Green O where they robbed a gasoline station of $90 Then taking prisoners the station's attendants Norman Schell 18 and Raymond Unkent 17 the robbers drove their captives into the country where they menaced them with a machine gun before turning them loose.

Gorman was captured at Van Buren O a few hours later where police said he admitted the robbery and kidnapings and named his accomplices.

WIFE, FRIEND HELD IN REYNOLD'S DEATH

Officials Strive for Solution in Puzzling Shooting of Tobacco Heir, Widow Says Memory Gone.

By The Associated Press

WINSTON SALEM N C July 9—A coroner's jury investigating the shooting to death of Smith Reynolds tobacco heir today ordered Mrs Libby Holman Reynolds and Albert Walker friend of the dead youth held as material witnesses pending a resumption of the inquest Monday afternoon.

Sheriff Scott said Mrs Reynolds would be allowed to remain at the Reynolds estate under guard but that Walker would be held in the county jail.

This development vied for interest with testimony given at a secret inquest yesterday by the boy millionaire's widow Libby Holman former Broadway blues singer.

Lying distraught and ill the black haired singer told a coroner's jury grouped about her that her mind contained a 40-hour blank broken only by a "flash."

In that flash she said she awoke from her strange mental lapse to see her 20-year-old husband press a pistol to his head He called "Libby" and pulled the trigger That was about 1 a m He died at 5 25 a m.

Married Recently

Miss Holman who became the secret bride of the heir to $25,000,000 of the R J Reynolds tobacco fortune only a few months ago swore that she could not remember anything else that happened from 11 p m Monday till Wednesday afternoon.

She testified that she had not been drinking that she took no medicine and that she had suffered no accident which might affect her memory She was described as offering no explanation for the mental lapse.

Inquest Resumed

Secret inquest into the shooting of Reynolds was resumed behind the locked gates of the palatial

Senate Passes Relief Bill

PRESIDENTIAL VETO LIKELY

Parties Join in Approving Garner Measure by Vote of 43-31

CREATES 2 BILLION FUND

Provides for Loans to States for Direct Aid of Unemployed

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON July 9 Senate approval today completed congressional action on the $2,100,000,000 unemployment relief bill.

Meanwhile a mile up Pennsylvania avenue President Hoover had his veto message completed and awaiting only the arrival of the bill on Monday.

From the highest administration sources it was said that the message would recommend the adoption of a relief bill virtually the same as the compromise measure acted upon but with the deletion of the sections pertaining to loans to individuals.

Secretary Mills conferred with the President immediately after final passage of the bill but had nothing to say upon it publicly.

As finally approved the bill provided for loans to individuals the provision which aroused a sharp conflict between President Hoover and Speaker Garner.

These loans would be made by the Reconstruction corporation from a fund of $1,000,000,000 created under the bill.

Other provisions would set up a $300,000,000 fund under the Reconstruction corporation for loans to states for direct relief of the jobless and appropriate for a $322,000,000 public construction program.

The vote was 43 to 31

Veto Next Week

There is little likelihood however that President Hoover will have an opportunity to veto the bill today It has yet to be signed by Speaker Garner and the house is in recess over the week end He must sign it during a session of the house.

Twenty-nine Democrats voted with 14 Republicans to approve the conference report in the final Twenty-five Republicans five Democrats and Shipstead the lone farmer-labor vote opposed adoption of the report.

Representative Snell of New York the Republican leader told President Hoover today he believed a new relief bill could be passed by congress within three days He said there would be no need for holding long hearings on a new bill.

STATE ROAD OFFICE OPENED HERE TODAY

H R Krebs, Acting Resident Engineer for County, To Be in Charge of Work.

The Marion county office of the state highway department was opened today on the fifth floor of the Huber building following the arrival of furniture and equipment yesterday.

The office will be the headquarters of Herbert R Krebs acting resident engineer and his assistants who are overseeing state highway work in this county.

Krebs announced that the office will not be open at all times but that he would spend part time there.

He also announced that the Federal Asphalt Paving Co of Hamilton will begin work Monday on a section of Harding highway five and two-thirds miles long between Morral and the county line The roadway will be widened to 30 feet by means of concrete strips poured along the side of the present roadway, and the roadway between the strips will be resurfaced with a bituminous material.

Workmen were pressing forward today on the widening and resurfacing of another five-mile section of the Harding highway between Big Island and Morral, following an interruption caused by Thursday's storm Concrete work on this job, Krebs reported is about 60 per cent completed, but resurfacing work has not been started The bottom slag will be widened to 30 feet by concrete strips and the roadway will be resurfaced with a bituminous material.

Snowstorm? No, 'Tis Only Army of White Moths

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK July 9 New York was invaded by countless thousands of white moths and winged ants in the early hours today and for a time many people thought they were witnessing a snow storm in July.

Crowds in Times Square gaped when the air suddenly became filled with the fluttering white insects which swarmed toward street lamps electric signs and illuminated store windows.

The winged ants made their presence felt by settling on faces necks and bare arms causing a general scratching spell.

The moths also invaded homes hotels and restaurants in large numbers They gradually disappeared with the coming of daylight.

It was believed they were blown over from Long Island by a strong east wind.

VETS DESERT CAPITAL FOR HOMEWARD RIDE

Hundreds Take Advantage of Free Return Trip, Many Others Remain.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON July 9 Hundreds of World war veterans today took advantage of the opportunity to ride the cushions homeward over the long miles they hitch hiked and "bummed" their way to Washington weeks ago to press their demands on congress for payment of the bonus.

By the time the ink was dry on President Hoover's signature yesterday to the bill for lending the bonus marchers $100,000 for transportation home and food en route disappointed recruits to the bonus-seeking ranks fell in line at the veterans administration offices and sought to muster out.

More than 600 had applied when the offices closed at midnight approximately a third that number were passed upon favorably, and many immediately set out for home Others were in line when the offices opened this morning.

Despite the lure of comfortable rides home and the increasing food shortage in the camps leaders of the army hoped to confine the departures to a comparatively few hundred.

Ranch News

(Will Rogers Special)

MULESHOE, Tex., July 9—Down here at the "Mashed O" my old friends, the Halsells ranch branding thousands of calves I been roping at em all day and they just look around and say, "go on comedian and do your stuff on the stage but don't try a real cowboy's racket" I'll catch one of the little rascals yet, if I have to bribe him.

Say I been so interested in real things I just quit reading the papers What is Congress doing? And why did Aimee's husband establish his good name?

A rumor just rode out to the round-up and said the "happy warrior" had decided to leave the war and be happy again.

Did you know that hogs went up two dollars a hundred while the two conventions were in session? Make your own joke.

U. S. View Unchanged, Washington Reports

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON July 9—A declaration that the United States has not changed its attitude on war debts since June 1931 was made by the state department today at about the same time a demand was made in the senate to know if any representative of the government had expressed a willingness to consider any further reduction in the debts.

The state department statement called attention to one issued by President Hoover on June 20 last year in which he said he was opposed to cancellation but that he was certain the American people had no desire to extract a sum beyond the capacity of any debtor to pay.

Senator McKellar Democrat of Tennessee introduced a resolution calling attention to press reports that the government had expressed a willingness to consider a further reduction and demanded to know if the reports were true and "if so by what authority any representative of the United States has taken such action."

McKellar pointed out that in approving the moratorium congress had declared its opposition to further change in the debts.

Another resolution was presented by Senator Gore, Democrat of Oklahoma requesting the state department to ascertain if any nations indebted to the United States desired to transfer any colonial possession to this country in lieu of each payment of the debts.

Meanwhile Senator Reed Republican of Pennsylvania, an administration supporter, reiterated his opposition to further [illegible] of the debts.

K.-P.'s Dream of Perfect Season Wrecked by Serv-U-Wel

CARDS' TITLE HOPES DAMAGED BY TRADING OF NUMEROUS STARS

Braves Hand 1931 Champs 6-1 Lacing, A's Gain Second in American

By The Associated Press

Branch Rickey atlas boss of the Cardinals undoubtedly handed the National league a swell race both artistically and financially when he began losing parts from his championship machine here and there a few months ago. It looks now like he might have tossed not wisely but too well.

The Cardinals bereft of such stars as Hafey, Grimes and Flowers never have figured in the current race and it is doubtful they will. Bill Hallahan alone of the pitching staff has done consistently good work and the club is lacking the punch.

The champs almost suffered the crowning ignominy yesterday when Bob Brown, Boston's crack rookie, set them down 6 to 1 on four hits.

The Pittsburgh Pirates put over a run in the ninth to defeat the Giants 8 to 7 and make it four out of five for the series while Bob Smith pitched Chicago to a 6 to 4 triumph over the Phillies who bunched their five errors in one inning to give the Cubs three runs. Brooklyn handed Cincinnati a 15 to 5 trimming.

Earl Combs' home run with two aboard gave the Yankees a 3 to 2 decision over Detroit and knocked the Tigers into third place in the American league.

The Athletics won two games from Chicago 6 to 4 and 11 to 4, and took over second place six and a half games back of the Yanks. Jimmy Foxx clouted his thirtieth homer.

Although hit hard Wes Ferrell stuck it out to turn in his sixteenth victory as Cleveland beat Washington again 6 to 5.

Ed Gallagher, former Boston college star, made his major league debut and before he could be taken out the St Louis Browns had scored five runs and were on their way to an 8 to 4 victory.

GROCERS RALLY TO GRAB 7-6 DECISION

K. Somerlot Drives in Winning Tally with Single; Kappas Trip Presbie A. C.; Prospect, Erie Win.

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor The Star

If the Knights of Pythias ever had hopes of their softball team going through the 14-game Commercial league schedule without a defeat they might as well start thinking up some other ideas. Their hopes of a perfect season were tossed into nonexistence yesterday afternoon. The Serv-U-Wel Grocers are responsible for the blasting of the Kay Pee dream of a perfect season. The Grocers staged a wild uprising in the sixth and seventh innings of a game with the lodge combine yesterday at Lincoln park, scoring seven runs in the two frames to hang a 7-6 beating on the won and lost ledger of the league leader.

The Kay Pee nine managed to cling to the league lead by the scant margin of half a game despite the loss. The Kappas are thundering along right at the heels of the pace setters with the other entries in the league far enough back that they constitute only a mild threat to either of the first two teams.

When the K. of P. softball nine was defeated yesterday by the Serv-U-Wel Grocers the last of the 12 city league teams joined the list of those beaten at least once. Two other teams, First Presbyterian of the No. 1 Sunday school league and Christian Seniors of the No. 2 church circuit have also been beaten only once.

Two of the 24 teams in the city have yet to win a game. The Lutherans of the No. 1 church league have lost nine and St. Paul's Episcopalians of the Commercial loop have lost eight.

Kappas Win Again

The Kappas yesterday took another game from the Presbyterian A. C. This time the score was 4-0 and the winners accomplished the feat with eight men on the field. The Erie Traffic club virtually erased the Masons from the championship picture by handing them a 3-0 whitewashing and Prospect grabbed an 8-6 victory from the luckless St. Paul Episcopal nine.

This Kay Pee-Serv-U-Wel co

It was one of those games you read about but seldom see. Don Lindsey started on the mound for the leaders and twirled no-hit ball the first four innings. During that time his mates had gathered in four runs and driven Johnny Vestal, the Serv-U-Wel pitcher, to cover. Starling Somerlot replaced Vestal. In the fifth Duckworth, Serv-U-Wel third sacker, gave notice of what was ahead by smacking out the first hit off Lindsey. In the sixth the fireworks broke loose.

Shields, the first man up, went out. The next two men got on and Starling Somerlot obliged by smashing a liner off the left field fence for a homer and three tallies. Francis Robbins followed suit by driving out another homer and deadlocking the count. Before the agony was ended the Grocers had accounted for two more and were leading, 6-4.

Deadlocked Again

The lodge team promptly got the two back in the first of the seventh when Don Lindsey was credited with the second home run of the day with one aboard. Francis Robbins replaced Somerlot to retire the last two Kay Pee batters when Somerlot showed signs of weakening rapidly.

The first man to face Lindsey in the last of the seventh again went out. The second singled. The third advanced him on an error. The next one hit to clog the sacks. The next went out and the bases were full with two down. Kenneth Somerlot then broke up the ball game with a clean single over the shortstop's head to win the ball game for the Grocers 7-6.

Dale Schwaderer pitched to three men in the fatal sixth but was so wild he was removed and Lindsey went back to finish the task.

The Kappas retained their second place post by whitewashing the Presbyterian A. C., giving them four hits and allowing only two men to reach third base. Rank did the pitching. The Kappas manufactured their four runs out of five hits.

Homer Enough

Stewart Jones started the pitching assignment for the Masons and got along all right for two innings but saw his victory chances go glimmering in the third when Studer smacked a homer with two on. That provided all the runs of the game as the score ended 3-0. Mason's Whiteum finished the game after the home run clout, Studer giving the railroaders only one hit the rest of the way.

Both St. Paul and Prospect played ragged ball but Prospect staged a big seven run rally in the sixth and added another run in the seventh to take an 8-6 decision from the Episcopalians. The losers amassed a six run lead in the first three innings but couldn't hold it. Chuck Evans clouted a homer for St. Paul.

MAT HEADLINER

Charles Fisher is the name his parents handed him when he made his debut to this planet. Midget Fisher is the name wrestling fans have christened him since he took up the pastime of toe twisting some time ago.

Charles, or is it Midget, will make his wrestling debut here Monday night at the Steam Shovel athletic field's open air arena when he opposes Fred Moran, the Boston Irishman, in a two-hour time limit match.

Midget, or is it Charles, should be a great favorite with the fans. He is fast and rough and that's the way the City of Prestige seems to like its mat gladiators.

Foxx, P. Waner in Dead Heat for Batting Honors

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 9—The alleged lift in the base balls used in the two major leagues last year is being shown up as a myth.

There might have been a gulf between the two groups of hitters last season but they must be getting them out of the same box this year.

Through yesterday's games, for instance, Paul Waner of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Jimmy Foxx of the Philadelphia Athletics were running a dead heat for batting honors, each with a .377 average.

If anything the National league's sluggers still seems to be traveling farther and with more rapidity. The senior circuit could show 10 batters hitting .327 or better.

Following are the figures:

NATIONAL LEAGUE—P. Waner, Pittsburgh .377; Hurst, Phillies .360; Lombardi, Cincinnati .360; Klein, Phillies .358; O'Doul, Brooklyn .351; Traynor, Pittsburgh .345; Orsatti, St. Louis .335; Herman, Cincinnati .335; Worthington, Boston .3[illegible]; Stephenson, Chicago .327; Ott, New York .3[illegible].

AMERICAN LEAGUE—Foxx, Philadelphia .377; Walker, Detroit .340; Averill, Cleveland .332; Gehrig, New York .332; Manush, Washington .327; Levey, St. Louis .326; Combs, New York .325; Dickey, New York .325; Lazzeri, New York .319; Burns, St. Louis .31[illegible].

Chuck Klein of the Phillies still had most of the individual laurels tucked away in the National league. He had scored the most runs, batted in the most runs, made more hits, belted the most home runs and was tied for the most triples with Babe Herman.

Foxx occupied a similar position in the American. In addition to heading the hitters he was the leading scorer, had the most hits, had knocked in more runs than any rival and was far in front in the home run race with 30.

Regatta Completed.

PUT-IN-BAY, O., July 9—With Bobkat, a Buffalo sloop, picked to represent the Interlake Yachting association in the Richardson trophy race on Lake St. Clair in September, the association's annual regatta came to a close today. Bobkat won the honor yesterday by decision. For the series result the judges gave second place to Spray, a Buffalo craft, and third to Ardette, a Detroit boat.

GIRL CHAMPS AMONG COMBINES BILLED IN FOUR-GAME PROGRAM

Cleveland, Columbus, Van Wert, E. Liverpool, Marion Play; Start 1 P. M.

The most elaborate exhibition of softball seen in Marion this season will be presented here Sunday afternoon starting at 1 p. m. at Lincoln park. Six teams will take part in four games, four of the teams being from foreign cities and two from the home city. One of the four out-of-town teams will be the world's champion Midvale Oil girls of Cleveland. Another, the Whittaker Morticians of Columbus, is a colored combine, rated as one of the fastest in the capital city.

The first game will match the Marion K. of P. nine, beaten but once this season, against the Whittaker Morticians and the result should be a great battle. The Morticians are known for their clowning as well as their ball playing and are coming here with the expectation of having a great battle.

The second game at 2 p. m. will see Helmick's Cigars of East Liverpool colliding with Van Wert. The East Liverpool nine has signed Speed Gettles of Mansfield to come here and do the flinging, so anxious are they to walk off with the trophy to be given the winner. Gettles will be remembered as the speed ball king who twirled the Yuncker Sports to victory in a previous Sunday tourney here this summer. Bob Elliott is managing the East Liverpool nine. The eastern Ohio aggregation came here last season and played the crack Linden Gophers outfit, matching everything the Gophers could produce except the pitching. With Gettles in the pitcher's box the team will be tough to beat.

Whittaker's Morticians will bring Bill Smith and Louis Dudley here as its ace tossers. Forrest Whittaker, former all American scholastic basketball, football and baseball star, will be in the lineup. This team has been going at a rapid clip in Columbus' fastest colored league.

The Erie Mechanics' strength, ened with some outside players, will meet the Cleveland girls at 3 p. m. Freddie Vestal is slated to do the pitching. With some other changes the railroaders will present a powerful lineup. Milt Fehler will be at shortstop for the Erie.

The K. of P. team will see only two shifts from the lineup which is leading the Commercial league race at present. Either Cliff Willoughby or Cloyce Messenger will do the catching in place of Wade Conkle and Myron Gibson will replace Judge Martin in left field.

Van Wert is bringing a team here of which little is known except that the club is the possessor of a good record in home district competition. The manager is confident his boys will make a good showing here.

The fourth game will match the winners of the first two games. The girls will play only one game.

Swanson Gains Slugging Lead in Association

CHICAGO, July 9—Another Columbus slugger, Evar Swanson, has climbed to the peak of the American Association batting list.

Swanson added 14 points to his average according to semi-official figures which include afternoon games of Thursday, while his team mate Nick Cullop, the leader for the past two weeks, lost eight and went into the lead with .371. Cullop was second with .365. Swanson also led in batting runs in with 60, was tied with Bill Knickerbocker of Toledo with 30 two base hits and shared the three base hit leadership with O'Dell Hale, another Mud Hen, at 11 each. He was runner up to Herman Layne of Louisville in base stealing, having completed 27 thefts to 29 for the leader.

Joe Mowry of Minneapolis lost the leadership in total bases to Pat Crawford, Columbus first baseman, but continued to be the leading scorer with 86 runs and had cracked out 1[illegible]5 hits to head that department. Crawford's total base collection was 20[illegible].

Joe Hauser, Miller first baseman, led in home runs with 23. Crawford and Cullop were tied for second with 17 each.

Behind Swanson and Cullop among the regulars in batting were Mowry, Minneapolis .363, Crawford, Columbus .352, Taitt, Minneapolis .35[illegible], Pick, Kansas City .3[illegible]1, [illegible], Indianapolis .339, [illegible], Indianapolis .336, Powers, Toledo .331, and Sam Hale, Indianapolis .331.

Two victories during the week gave Bill Lee of Columbus the fine record of 11 games won and two lost and placed him at the head of the pitching class. Joe Heving was credited with one victory and had nine and two for the season. Hi Vandenberg, young Minneapolis hurler, suffered two defeats to spoil his perfect record.

Columbus added five points to its average and led with .319. Indianapolis lost a point but remained second with .302 while Kansas City held third place with .301. St. Paul retained the lead in team fielding with .97[illegible] and had clicked off 111 doubleplays in 75 games.

YOU'RE UP, DOT—LET'S HAVE A HIT

It's a hit! That's the usual cry of the fans when Dot Underwood, clouting centerfielder of the world's champion Midvale Oil girls softball team of Cleveland, comes to the plate. Dot, you understand, is one of the team's best hitters, having rolled up a .427 percentage over a long period of play.

But all right, Miss Underwood, then will see what can be done about boosting this average when she and her team mates invade Lincoln park here Sunday for an exhibition game against an all star Marion boys combine.

The Midvale Oil girls will play at 3 p. m., their game being part of a four game softball program.

SAINTS AID MILLERS BY TAKING THREE IN ROW FROM COLUMBUS

Minneapolis Beats Toledo To Hold Association Top; Indians Stop Kaws

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 9—The antics of the St. Paul club during the last three days have proved a boon to Minneapolis as far as the Columbus menace is concerned.

With the battle for the leadership of the American Association so tight that it squeaks, Minneapolis has needed help in standing off challengers. The Saints obliged by taking three games from the Red Birds while the Millers have managed to whip Toledo twice in three engagements.

The Millers had only a margin over the Indians today and things might have been very different had not St. Paul shoved Columbus around. The Saints yesterday came from behind to win 9 to 5. Hill's pitching and Paul P... batting brought Minneapolis a 5 to 3 victory over Toledo. Hill gave the Hens only six hits. Richards slammed out a homer, two doubles and a single in five runs.

Bubber Jonnard held Milwaukee with only four hits as Louisville evened the series with a 7 to 1 victory.

Indianapolis kept pace by beating Kansas City in a night game 5 to 4 to make it three

Uncle Sam To Choose Olympic Matmen at Columbus Today

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., July 9—Uncle Sam will select his wrestling team for the tenth Olympiad here this afternoon and tonight in the final rounds of the American tryouts which started Thursday with more than 100 youths full of hope.

From this number only 35 will enter the semi-final round this afternoon and after tonight only one will be left in each of the seven classes. These seven automatically become members of the team but the Olympic committee will take a hand in the proceedings and hand pick the seven alternates.

In only one division was the final reached last night. That was the 191 pound class where Rob Teague, Oklahoma Teachers college, and Conrad Caldwell, Los Angeles A. C., remain to fight it out for first honors.

Carey Meets Tough Foe

Don Donelson's semi-pro Carey will attempt to even an old score Sunday afternoon when they meet the strong Gulf Pride of Delta at Carey. The Gulf Pride played last season as the Olds Senators of Toledo and beat the Carey team two out of three. The northern Ohio team also holds a decision over Carey early this season.

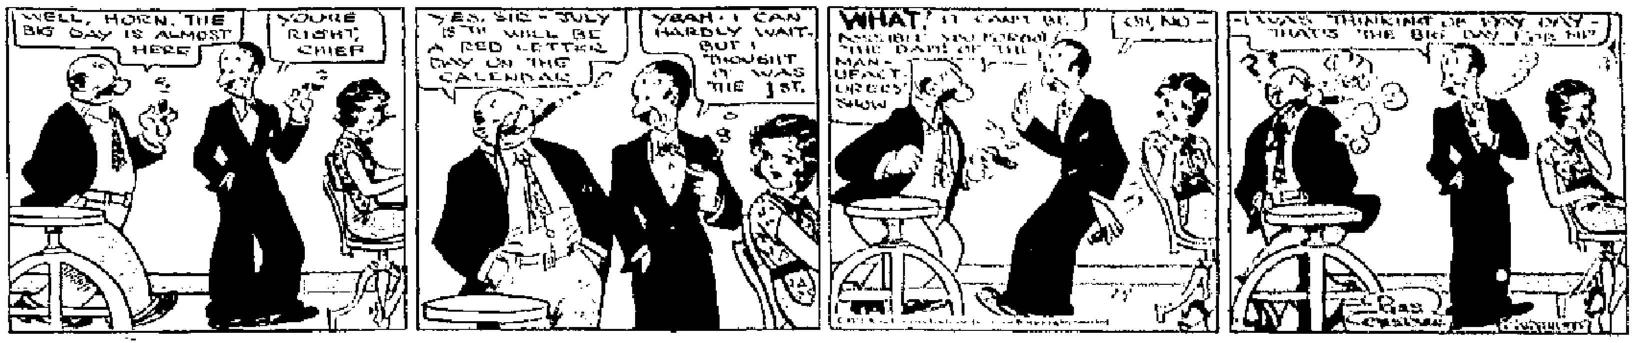
BY RUSS WESTOVER



WELL, HORN, THE BIG DAY IS ALMOST HERE
YOU'RE RIGHT, CHIEF
YES, SIR — JULY 15TH WILL BE A RED LETTER DAY ON THE CALENDAR
YEAH — I CAN HARDLY WAIT. BUT I THOUGHT IT WAS THE 1ST.
WHAT? IT CAN'T BE POSSIBLE YOU FORGOT THE DATE OF THE MANUFACTURERS' SHOW
OH, NO —
I WAS THINKING OF PAY DAY — THAT'S THE BIG DAY FOR ME

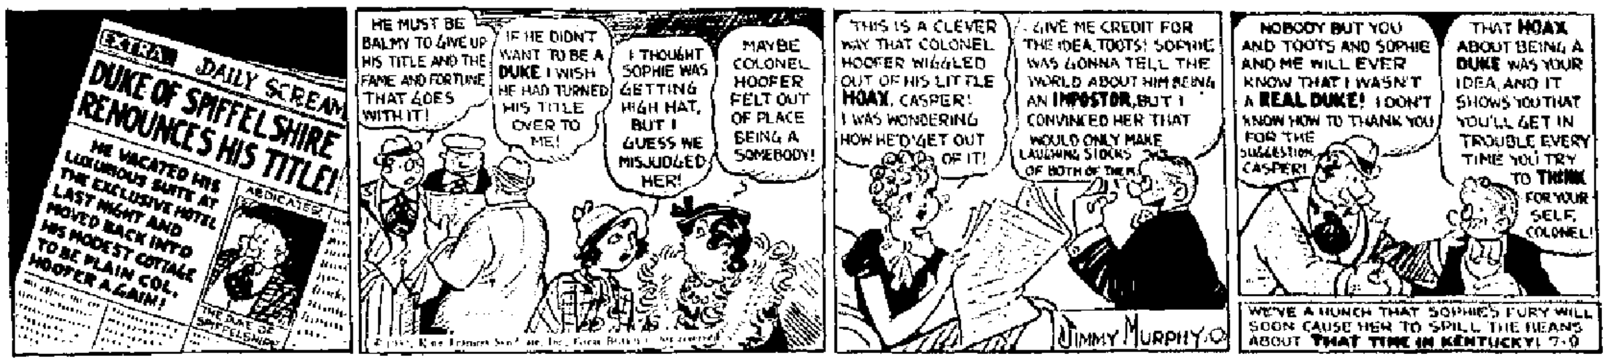
TOOTS AND CASPER

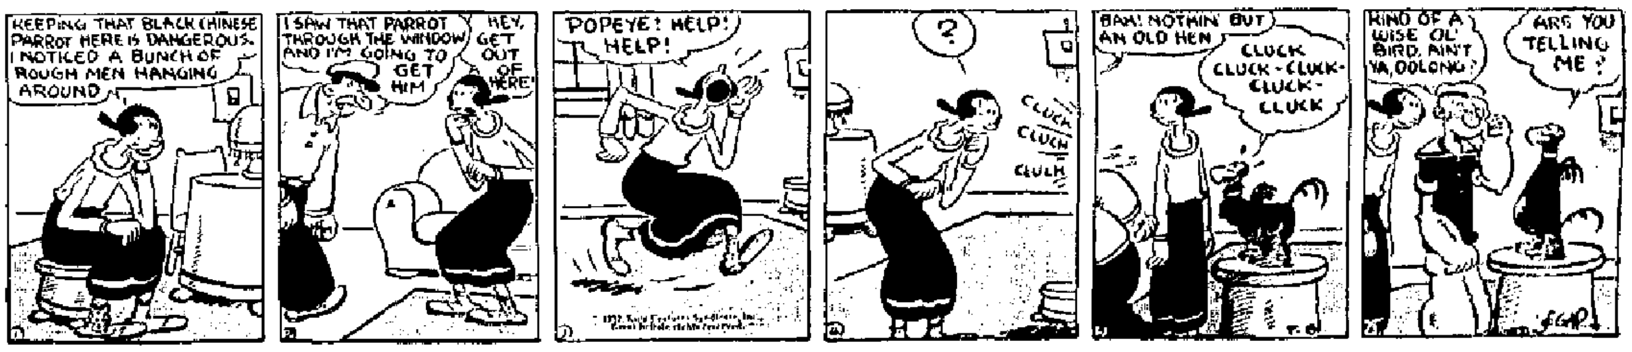
BY JIMMY MURPHY



EXTRA DAILY SCREAM
DUKE OF SPIFFELSHIRE RENOUNCES HIS TITLE!
HE VACATED HIS LUXURIOUS SUITE AT THE EXCLUSIVE HOTEL LAST NIGHT AND MOVED BACK INTO HIS MODEST COTTAGE TO BE PLAIN COL. HOOFER AGAIN!
ABDICATES!
THE DUKE OF SPIFFELSHIRE
HE MUST BE BALMY TO GIVE UP HIS TITLE AND THE FAME AND FORTUNE THAT GOES WITH IT!
IF HE DIDN'T WANT TO BE A DUKE I WISH HE HAD TURNED HIS TITLE OVER TO ME!
I THOUGHT SOPHIE WAS GETTING HIGH HAT, BUT I GUESS WE MISJUDGED HER!
MAYBE COLONEL HOOFER FELT OUT OF PLACE BEING A SOMEBODY!
THIS IS A CLEVER WAY THAT COLONEL HOOFER WIGGLED OUT OF HIS LITTLE HOAX, CASPER! I WAS WONDERING HOW HE'D GET OUT OF IT!
GIVE ME CREDIT FOR THE IDEA, TOOTS! SOPHIE WAS GONNA TELL THE WORLD ABOUT HIM BEING AN IMPOSTOR, BUT I CONVINCED HER THAT WOULD ONLY MAKE LAUGHING STOCKS OUT OF BOTH OF THEM!
JIMMY MURPHY
NOBODY BUT YOU AND TOOTS AND SOPHIE AND ME WILL EVER KNOW THAT I WASN'T A REAL DUKE! I DON'T KNOW HOW TO THANK YOU FOR THE SUGGESTION, CASPER!
THAT HOAX ABOUT BEING A DUKE WAS YOUR IDEA, AND IT SHOWS YOU THAT YOU'LL GET IN TROUBLE EVERY TIME YOU TRY TO THINK FOR YOUR SELF, COLONEL!
WE'VE A HUNCH THAT SOPHIE'S FURY WILL SOON CAUSE HER TO SPILL THE BEANS ABOUT THAT TIME IN KENTUCKY! 7-9

THIMBLE THEATER

BY SEGAR



KEEPING THAT BLACK CHINESE PARROT HERE IS DANGEROUS. I NOTICED A BUNCH OF ROUGH MEN HANGING AROUND
I SAW THAT PARROT THROUGH THE WINDOW AND I'M GOING TO GET HIM
HEY, GET OUT OF HERE!
POPEYE! HELP! HELP!
CLUCK CLUCK CLUCK
BAH! NOTHIN' BUT AN OLD HEN
CLUCK CLUCK - CLUCK - CLUCK - CLUCK
KIND OF A WISE OL' BIRD, AIN'T YA, OOLONG?
ARE YOU TELLING ME?

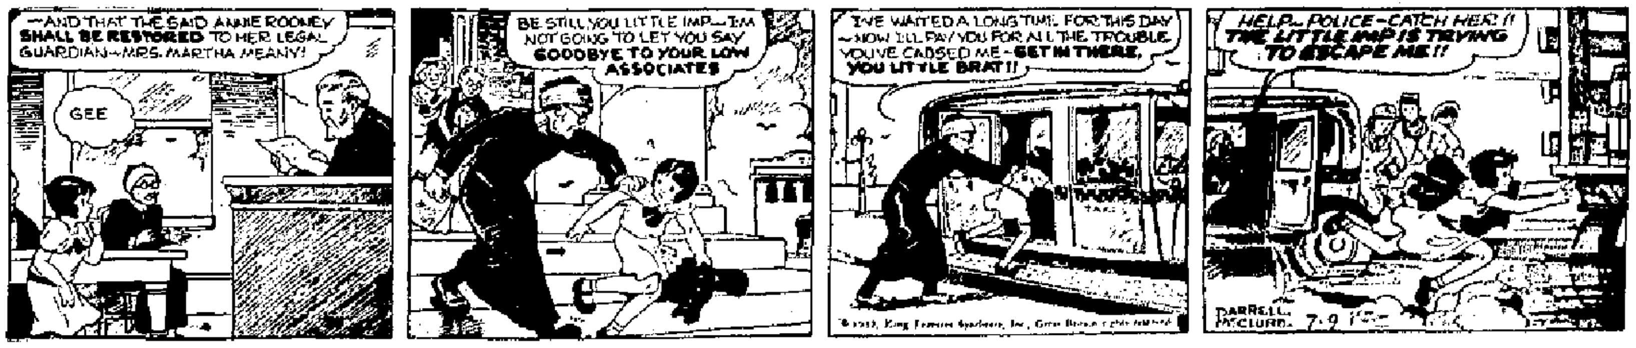
ANNIE ROONEY

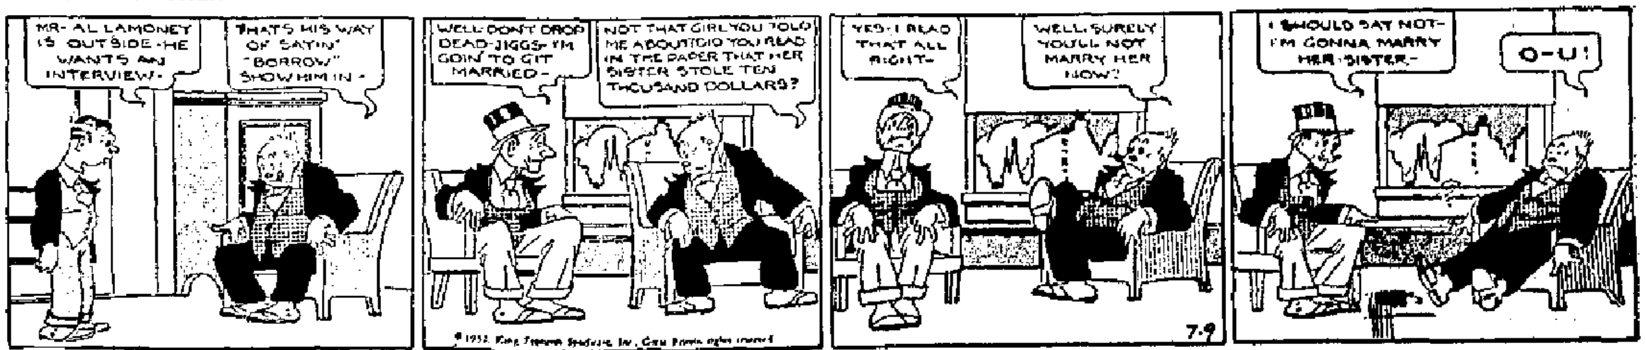
BY DARREL McCLURE



— AND THAT THE SAID ANNIE ROONEY SHALL BE RESTORED TO HER LEGAL GUARDIAN — MRS. MARTHA MEANY!
GEE
BE STILL YOU LITTLE IMP — I'M NOT GOING TO LET YOU SAY GOODBYE TO YOUR LOW ASSOCIATES
I'VE WAITED A LONG TIME FOR THIS DAY — NOW I'LL PAY YOU FOR ALL THE TROUBLE YOU'VE CAUSED ME — GET IN THERE, YOU LITTLE BRAT!!
TAXI
HELP — POLICE — CATCH HER!! THE LITTLE IMP IS TRYING TO ESCAPE ME!!
DARRELL McCLURE 7-9

BRINGING UP FATHER

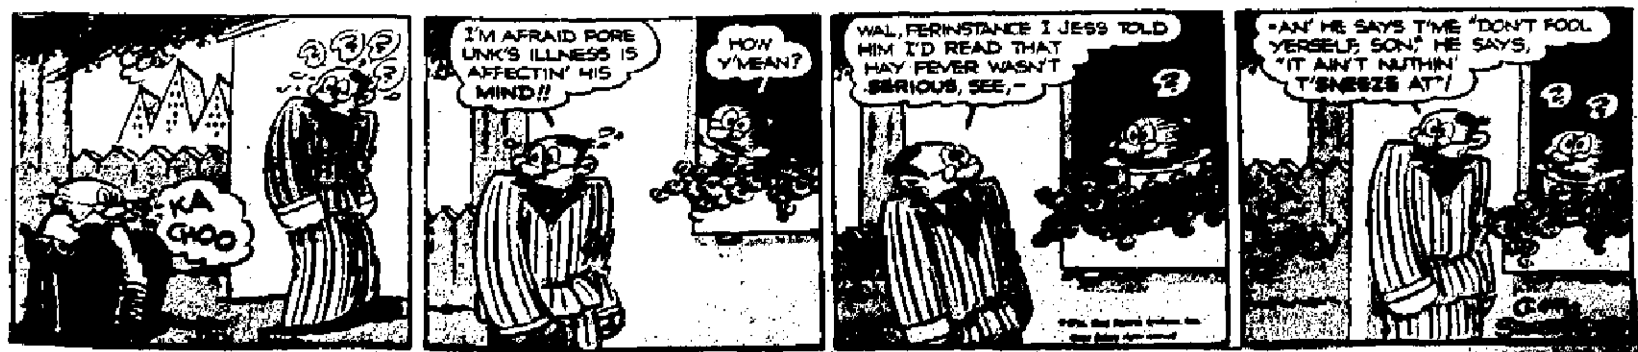
BY GEORGE McMANUS



MR. AL LAMONEY IS OUTSIDE — HE WANTS AN INTERVIEW —
THAT'S HIS WAY OF SAYIN' "BORROW" — SHOW HIM IN —
WELL, DON'T DROP DEAD, JIGGS — I'M GOIN' TO GIT MARRIED —
NOT THAT GIRL YOU TOLD ME ABOUT? DID YOU READ IN THE PAPER THAT HER SISTER STOLE TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS?
YES — I READ THAT ALL RIGHT —
WELL, SURELY YOU'LL NOT MARRY HER NOW?
7-9
I SHOULD SAY NOT — I'M GONNA MARRY HER SISTER —
O-U!

POLLY AND HER PALS

BY CLIFF STERRETT



KA CHOO
I'M AFRAID PORE UNK'S ILLNESS IS AFFECTIN' HIS MIND!!
HOW Y'MEAN?
WAL, FERINSTANCE I JESS TOLD HIM I'D READ THAT HAY FEVER WASN'T SERIOUS, SEE, —
"AN' HE SAYS T'ME "DON'T FOOL YERSELF, SON," HE SAYS, "IT AIN'T NUTHIN' T'SNEEZE AT"!

CAUTION SENDS PRICES DOWN

Traders Ignore Offerings While Awaiting Government Crop Report.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO July 9—With a government crop report from Washington due Monday wheat traders backed away from offerings today and values underwent a succession of narrow declines and intermittent rallies.

Buying power was poor in all the grain pits Nearly all the large wheat consuming countries of Europe were reported preparing to use their domestic wheat as soon and as long as possible and keep the import of foreign wheat down to a minimum

Wheat closed unsettled ⅛@⅜ under yesterday's finish Corn ⅛@¼ down oats also ⅛@¼ off and provisions unchanged to a rise of 17 cents

Adding to downward pressure on wheat values were advices that overseas importers were buying very sparingly despite Lausanne developments which it was asserted should improve credit conditions Setbacks in securities at New York were also a bearish factor at times as to wheat Advices from Hillsboro N D that grain had deteriorated 15 per cent in the last fortnight tended though to bring about price rallies The deterioration was associated with several frosts which caught plants in the milk stage

A leading crop authority here said that early stages of black rust were now general in United States spring wheat fields northwest and just across the border in Canada showing up further north day by day He asserted that if cool weather continued until kernels passed the soft dough period no important damage would result On the other hand a few days of high temperatures would aggravate the disease with serious crop damage as a consequence Corn and oats trailed after wheat market changes

Provisions were firm responsive to steadiness of hog values

NEW VACCINE MAY CURE TUBERCULOSIS

Wisconsin Scientist Finds Bacilli After 25 Years of Experimenting

By The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE Wis July 9 In a copyright story the Milwaukee Sentinel today said 20 years of research by Dr William D Frost agricultural bacteriologist at the University of Wisconsin have been rewarded by discovery of a vaccine "Tubivase" which ultimately may bring partial control of tuberculosis

The scientist in confirming the story warned against assumption that "Tubivase" was either a sure cure or a certain means of prevention He has not yet completed his experiments

Results of experiments on guinea pigs and rabbits the Sentinel said indicate the vaccine was beneficial for immunization

It is a line of work surely worth following Dr Frost is quoted

Dr Frost in preparing the vaccine the Sentinel related followed the method of Dr Harry Steenbock Badger scientist who discovered he could increase vitamin content of food by use of the ultra violet ray

The vaccine is obtained from isolated tubercle bacilli treated by ultra violet rays

The rays the paper said effectively kill the germs of tuberculosis but apparently produce little chemical change in their [illegible] bodies or toxins and from the ray treated bacilli the doctor obtained a vaccine which was physically harmless yet potent enough to combat live bacilli

"In 'Tubivase'" the Sentinel says "the bacilli are dead in the sense they can not grow and cause disease but are more active than the heat killed bacilli in affording immunity"

COURT UPHELD IN TWO CASES

Appeals Judges Hand Down Decision in Three Suits from County.

The common pleas court was affirmed in two cases and reversed in a third in rulings of the Third district court of appeals received here yesterday by Everett B Grigsby, clerk of courts

A judgment against William C Houpt and others for $45 obtained by Amber W Somerlott was affirmed by the appellate court. The case previously had been decided in favor of Somerlot in both the municipal and common pleas courts. Somerlot had an account with Houpt, and Houpt had an account with Somerlot and the courts decided that when the claims had been offset that $45 was due Somerlot. Frank Wiedemann was counsel for Houpt and the law firm of Wilhelm & Robinson represented Somerlot.

The error proceedings of the Home Building, Savings & Loan Co. against C. A. Judson, treasurer of the Bank Depositors Guaranty Co of Cleveland was reversed after the appellate court found in the common pleas court proceedings

Judson brought suit in the common pleas court and obtained judgment for $5,000 which had been left on deposit in the loan company by the estate of George C Gruber. Gruber, it was contended, had been a former official of the company and had deposited the money in his own name, although it belonged to the company. The appellate court held that Judson should not have been given judgment for the amount by the common pleas court.

The common pleas court was affirmed in the error proceedings of Paul Snack and others against the Marion Furniture Co. In common pleas court, the Marion Furniture Co. was given judgment for $100 against the Marion Chattel Loan Co.

This case was begun in common pleas court as an action of the Marion Furniture Co against Paul Snack and the Marion Chattel Loan Co to obtain a balance due the furniture company on furniture it had sold to Floyd Moore. While $119.31 was still due on the furniture, possession of the furniture was transferred to Paul Snack. The furniture company contended that the loan company had taken possession of the furniture from Moore on a mortgage and had resold it to Snack. The loan company's contention was that Snack bought the furniture from Moore and that the loan company merely refinanced it for Snack. The common pleas court awarded the furniture company judgment against the chattel loan company.

Frank Wiedemann represented the loan company and Homer E Johnson represented the Marion Furniture Co.

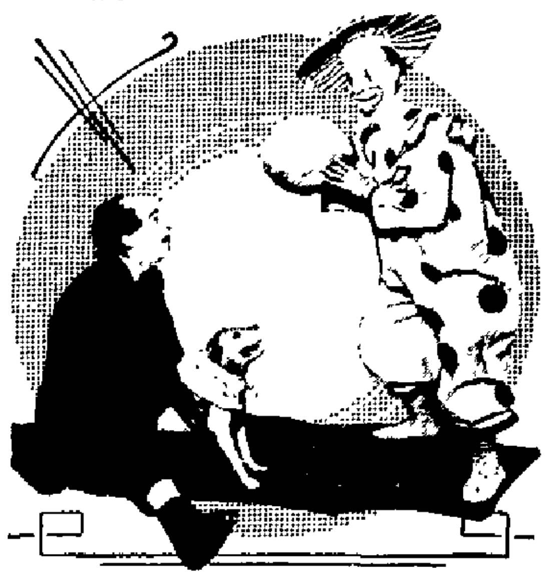
TWO STAR CIRCUS COMEDIANS



EARL SHIPLEY AND MICKEY McDONALD

What the newspaper critics say is the funniest collection of clowns ever before the public will be in evidence when the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus stages two exhibitions here on Tuesday, July 12. The management of this noted circus, realizing that fun is the spice of life, has signed only "joeys" who have reputations as the best gloom-chasers in America.

Prominent among the funsters will be Earl Shipley and Mickey McDonald. These two "Merry Andrews" will be assisted by half a hundred of the white-faced boys and they will be seen in scores of laughable skits and clever by-play during the lengthy program.

Among the highly important displays with the show this season, will be Clyde Beatty with his 34 wild lions and tigers, the Famous Hanneford Family with Poodles, greatest of all riding clowns; the famous troupes of acrobats and the gorgeously mounted and talented opening pageant "Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt."

"BLIND" FLYING TEST NEW U.S. RULE

* * *

Interstate Transport Fliers Face Rigid Requirement

By International News Service

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The youth fired with ambition to become an airplane pilot today must meet requirements which were not even dreamed of three years ago. And Uncle Sam has just made it doubly difficult to qualify as a transport pilot in interstate service by adding the "blind" flying test—the most stringent in the history of aviation.

The ancient trial by fire—or sword—by which the youth of old proved himself worthy of responsibility was no more exacting than this new test which the U. S. Government requires of the man who would earn his living flying people from one point to another in regularly scheduled planes.

"Blind" flying, in short, is piloting an airplane only by instrument without sight of the ground. To grasp the significance of this, try to imagine driving an automobile at two miles a minute in utter darkness, except for a faint light illuminating your instrument board. Add to this problem the third dimension which is found in the air and you have an idea of the difficulties encountered.

Severe Test Required

The new department of commerce ruling on "blind" flying requires that a pilot must be capable of flying entirely by instrument in straight level flight, in moderate banks, minimum glides and maximum climbs, climbing turns and recovery from stalls, skids, slips, spirals and banks. Not only that, but he must convince a federal inspector riding with him that he can perform all these maneuvers with his cockpit securely hooded.

The completely blanketed cockpit duplicates, as near as possible, the conditions which a pilot encounters in dense fog or stormy weather. It forces him to prove that he can fly as well by dials as by the combination of good visibility and instruments. Although the transport pilot does not rely solely on his instrument board when he can see familiar objects, and the government does not intend that he should, the "blind" flying requirements were made to add one more safeguard to transportation aloft.

Instructions Begun

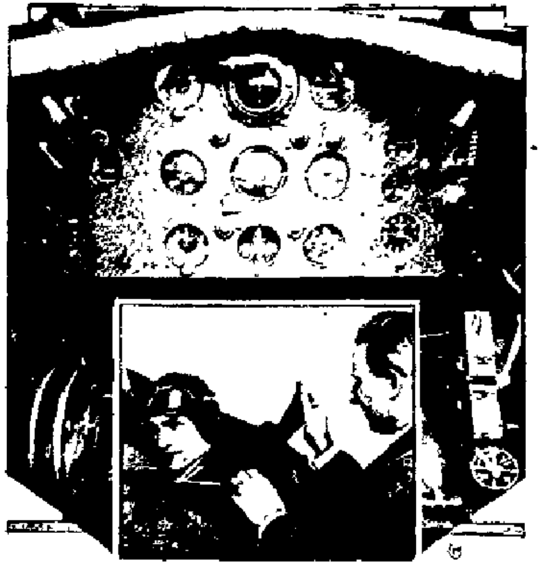
Airline companies to observe the new federal ruling, have started to instruct and test all their pilots in "blind" flying. Among these is Eastern Air Transport which, for some time, has maintained a school at Newark airport to teach its pilots to rely on their instruments in an emergency. Fifteen thousand other young men, now holding student pilots' licenses, eventually must pass the new government test.

Required as "blind" flying is today, it could not be done until accurate instruments had been invented to tell the pilot exactly where he was in relation to the earth, even though he could not see it. The principal instruments now used to fly through darkness, fog and storm with perfect safety are the Sperry horizon, which shows the pilot where his plane is in relation to the true horizon, the directional gyroscopic dial which keeps him on his course; the air speed indicator, which shows him how fast he is flying; the bank and turn indicator which shows him what degree of turn he is making, if any, and the compass, by which he sets his course.

Other Requirements

In addition to adding the "blind" flying requirements for transport pilots the department of commerce has ruled that this type of flier also must have to his credit at least 1,200 hours of certified solo flying, and that 500 hours of this time shall have been spent in cross country flying.

So, if you're thinking of becoming one of those young men who sit at the controls of a modern air leviathan and wing passengers over the 36,000 miles of airlines which America boasts, you'd better start training now.



Lower photo shows Howard Stark, "blind" flying instructor for Eastern Air Transport, closing the hood over Pilot Frank Jerdone preparatory to Jerdone passing the strict government test at Newark airport. Upper photo shows typical instrument board of a mail plane. It is on these instruments, particularly those in the upper center dark panel, that a pilot must rely when flying "blind." In the top center position is the Sperry Horizon. The air speed indicator is to the right and directional gyroscopic dial to the left. Below the horizon is the turn and bank indicator.

ITALIAN SEES WORLD ON FOOT

By International News Service

MILAN, Italy—Antonio Zetta of Capoistria, has established his own record. He is only 30 years old but he has walked 'round the world since 1922 and seen no fewer than 179 kings and queens. Many will not believe there are that number left on the thrones of the globe but Zetta has a list of them and autographs of most.

He took part in Roosevelt's last expedition in Brazil, and that gave him the wanderlust. He went through Japan, China and penetrated into Thibet, where few white men have gone—to return, alive or dead. This with Asia, Russia and Austria, took him eight years.

He has been captured by Chinese bandits, fought in the ranks of Chang Foh Kuei's army, and rose to be colonel in it. But the wanderlust again took hold of him and he walked across India, Persia, Turkey and the Balkans to Italy, which he thoroughly tramped in less than a year.

The sovereigns he has visited are chiefly in the Orient but he does not despair of shaking hands with President Hoover before the year is out. He means to hike all over the states and take a look at Canada.

NOGALES, Ariz., July 9—A four-foot wall of water, sweeping down the mountains of Sonora as the result of a torrential rain, caused damage estimated at more than $75,000 when it struck the two border cities of Nogales, Ariz., and Nogales, Sonora last night. More than a score of Adobe houses in Nogales, Sonora collapsed as the water melted their foundations.

ASCRIBES LOVE TO RIGHT WAVE LENGTH

By United Press

PARIS—Love and hate are merely matters of wave lengths in the ether according to Dr. Moineau, father of the science of divining in a paper which he read at the convention of diviners recently in Avignon.

"All bodies are enveloped in a central field of radiation which has the form of an ellipse and whose axis is sometimes orientated north-south and sometimes east-west," explained the savant. "The method of differentiation is based on the length of waves in each case."

Consequently, if a man with polar waves meets a woman with equatorial radiations immediately a feeling of distrust or even extreme hatred is set up and the fact that two people like each other on first sight, or that the feeling switches immediately to love is likewise explainable by Dr. Moineau's theory of radio-activity.

There are 16 divisions of the bodies enveloped in the central field of radiation, each one having its own type of activity or wave length. A special stick is used to divine each class of waves, and this, in turn, prevents the interference of parasitical waves trying to force themselves in.

DOUG FAIRBANKS JR., ANN DVORAK PLAY "LOVE IS A RACKET"

On the heels of the announcement that the picture "Love Is a Racket," starring Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and featuring Ann Dvorak, will show at the Ohio Sunday and Monday, comes the announcement that Miss Dvorak has walked out on her studio because of salary difficulties. She and her husband, Leslie Fenton, are New York bound via the Panama Canal.

Ask Yourself These Questions in Choosing a Bank

1. Is it firmly established in the esteem of substantial people.
2. Is it directed by men whose ability and integrity are above question?
3. Are its old customers loyal—if so, why?
4. Would an account there lend prestige?
5. Are its resources large enough to meet customer's growing needs with ease and satisfaction?
6. Are its officers and employes friendly and courteous?
7. Is it easy to reach, affording the convenience so desirable in a banking connection?

The way in which this bank measures up these questions is evidenced by its selection by thousands of customers who say with pride, "That's My Bank."

[illegible]

The sales [illegible] in the [illegible] of [illegible] auctions of the Marion Livestock Sales Co. last Monday afternoon swelled the total number of head sold by the company to 18,[illegible]. The price paid for stock sold in these markets has reached the staggering total of $1[illegible]960.

Among the stock sold under the auction plan have been 11,477 hogs, 210 cattle, 1,044 veal calves, [illegible]617 sheep and 154 horses.

More than 50,000 persons have attended the sales including several hundred expert stock buyers from Ohio and adjoining states.

Began Feb. 9

This briefly is the history of the [illegible] new livestock sales company which began operations here last Feb. 9. The growth of the sales has been steady as farmers and breeders from the Marion trade area have watched the success of this new method in marketing [illegible] to try this modern method. The sales company has been the [illegible] of a steadily increasing volume of stock.

Marion is one of six Ohio cities in which the auction plan of livestock sales is carried on extensively. Other companies are in [illegible] Chillicothe, Hillsboro, Lancaster and Ashland.

Each company acts as a broker, the firm inviting representatives of packing plants, large meat dealers and stock buyers to bid on stock consigned to the company by breeders and farmers. Buyers are grouped around a sales arena over which a professional auctioneer presides. Stock is driven into the arena one animal at a time or in [illegible] according to the type of animal and is offered for sale. After bidding is closed the stock is driven to the loading platforms and shipped or trucked away.

Commission is Small

The sales company takes the buyer's check and issues its company check to the farmer or consignor the following day after deducting a small commission from the sale price. The company's revenue is derived entirely from this commission, the charge ranging from 20 cents to $1.50 a head depending on the type of animal. The company will insure the stock and guarantee payment for an additional charge of 50 cents per $100.

Selling stock through any one of these companies is relatively a simple matter for the farmer who [illegible] follow his stock through the various steps of the sale. Farmers [illegible] to the company's [illegible] in the morning preceding the weekly afternoon sale. The stock is graded by experts and when practicable is classified according to grade. Animals are [illegible] for identification by numbered slips of paper glued to their hide and placed in pens from which they are later driven to the sales arena.

James M. Caldwell of Chillicothe, sales manager for the five companies now operating in Ohio, points out that the farmer or stockman can market a few animals just as advantageously under the auction plan as by car load lots through conventional sales channels. He can oversee the entire sale process and receive his money within 24 hours of the sale. His fine stock is certain to bring a price above average for the animals are carefully classified, he said.

Introduces Plan

Caldwell has been largely responsible for the introduction of the auction sales plan in Ohio. He had several years experience with this type of market in Kentucky before coming to Ohio. In Kentucky, he said, there are 54 successful livestock markets employing the auction plan, all organized since 1922. Their annual volume aggregates between $36,000,000 and $40,000,000 he said.

Although Caldwell oversees the sales companies each company is an independent corporation. The Marion company is capitalized at $20,000 and its physical plant is typical of those used by auction sales companies. It consists of a sales arena [illegible] capable of handling [illegible] block, an unloading [illegible] grading [illegible] and [illegible] a lunch stand and an office.

[illegible] Caldwell is president of the company and Low Iley is vice president. George M. Parks, [illegible] Vernon avenue, is secretary and treasurer and is in active charge of the local sales. W. F. Miller is sales manager.

The sales are conducted in the company's modern pavilion just west of the Big Four railroad tracks on West Center street. The public is invited to attend the sales. An average of more than 2,000 spectators have attended each sale since the company began operations here.

Our friends in the Far East he said must show the homage to the League of Nations as other countries do.

After the conference was officially closed the delegates drank a toast to world prosperity.

Await Action by U S

The convention does not go into effect however until it is ratified by the parliaments of the initialing countries which by an unwritten agreement will not take place until after the United States reconsiders the question of scaling down the war debts due her from Europe.

The next step was expected to be a request from these powers to the United States to join in a parley to revise war debts.

The agreement reached following the break of the Franco-German deadlock yesterday contains a preamble detailing the conference's efforts for peace and five resolutions outlining the terms of the settlement.

The resolutions were briefly: (1) An agreement regarding reparations between Germany and the former allies. (2) Conditional measures extending a moratorium on inter-governmental debts. (3) An agreement to assist Austria and the Danubian states which are in financial difficulties. (4) Creation of a committee to study the grain problem in the Danubian states which are embarrassed by a huge grain surplus and (5) Creation of the machinery for a world economic conference under the auspices of the League of Nations.

There was nothing about a gentlemen's agreement linking reparations with war debts nor was there any reference to the war guilt clause of the Versailles treaty.

Shortly after the agreement was announced last night a statement came from Washington saying the United States was now ready to consider any proposals its European debtors might care to make for the reconsideration of war debts settlements.

Enthusiasm Aroused

The announcement created a profound impression on the European delegates and was greeted with expressions of joy. Dino Grandi Italian foreign minister hailed it as the best news since the opening of the conference.

Louis Germain Martin of the French delegation said "We are naturally happy to hear that it bears out the policy France has followed."

The agreement with Germany containing the kernel of the settlement provided that the German government shall turn over to the world bank for international settlements 3,000,000,000 marks worth approximately $721,500,000 of redeemable 5 per cent bonds their value based on gold of the present standard of weight and fineness.

It was prefaced with a declaration of the firm intention of helping to create a new order permitting the establishment and development of confidence between the nations in the mutual spirit of reconciliation collaboration and justice.

Press of London Praises Settlement

LONDON July 9—The London daily press today welcomed the reparations settlement at Lausanne as a great achievement a happy omen and the world's best news since the war but added it was only the first step toward a settlement of the world's economic troubles.

Eyes would now be turned across the Atlantic the papers said to see what the United States would do on the question of revising the war debts.

Comparing Europe to a patient from whose system poison had been extracted, the Times said the patient was still weak and restoratives and other remedies were needed. These it added could not be supplied by Europe alone.

The Morning Post referring to Washington's expression of an American readiness to consider suggestions on the debts remarked that the British attitude is that all inter-governmental payments are obstacles to the world's recovery.

Von Papen Talks on War Guilt

By The Associated Press

BERLIN July 9—Equality for Germany was demanded by Chancellor Franz von Papen last night in an address broadcast by radio from Lausanne following the announcement of the reparations agreement.

Although Germany waived its demand for wiping out of the war guilt clauses of the Versailles treaty in the compromise with the French on reparations the chancellor said the Lausanne agreement would have a permanent effect only if it led to clearing of the questions affecting the political rights of the German people.

In the name of Germany he said "I raise anew the peoples demand that they be treated on a basis of equality in rights and duties."

Principals in Hutton-St Pierre Case Under Guard Following Threats

LOS ANGELES Calif July 9—Myrtle Joan St Pierre attractive brunette nurse may know before the day is over the jury's verdict in her $200,000 breach of promise suit against David Hutton choir singer for his alleged jilting of her to marry Evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson. Only the instructions to the jury by Superior Judge Lester W Roth remained before the jury began its deliberations.

The special Saturday session of court found both principals in the case the courtroom and defense counsel under special guard.

Willedd Andrews attorney for Hutton reported to police he had received threats of death over the telephone.

"You have talked too much" Andrews said a voice over the telephone told him. "We have just killed Roy Watkins. We got him and you are next with Mark Jones and the other fellow."

Police were inclined to believe the threat was the work of a fanatic although they were unable to get in touch with Watkins a private investigator of Angelus Temple of which Mrs Hutton is pastor. He was reported at his home to be out of town. The Mark Jones and the other fellow referred to are other defense attorneys.

The bill came before the senate after Senate Democrats had agreed to support the conference report on the relief bill.

Immediately after this announcement was made the senate took up the bill with Democratic support virtually assuring its approval.

The Democrats gave their support in view of Speaker Garner's refusal to modify the provision for loans to individuals which the President objects.

The decision was not binding however and it was understood that some of the Democratic senators would vote against the report.

Expecting a veto for the bill the Democrats also considered alternative plans for enacting a compromise bill if the President acts adversely.

It was agreed that the new relief bill could be based either on a bill already passed by the senate and now pending in the house or a measure which has already passed the house and is now pending in the senate.

In the event of a veto effort will be made to revive the legislation. Democratic Leader Robinson said "There are at least three ways in which this may be done. The house may attach amendments if it desires to the $300,000,000 bill and pass the measure, or the senate may attach amendments to the road bill which has passed the house.

"Either of these two courses would result in a new conference which probably would reach a quick agreement.

"The third plan would be to eliminate from the pending bill the feature which might constitute the basis of a veto.

"It will be necessary that conferences promptly be held in the event of a veto with a view to ... [illegible] ..."

Walker who is 19 years old was taken into custody at the request of the coroner.

It was Walker who gave the first version of the tragedy to the public indicating it was a clear case of suicide. He said he heard the shot rushed upstairs and found Reynolds dying on a sun porch adjoining the young couple's bedroom.

Weeping bitterly Miss Holman attended her husband's quiet funeral yesterday.

After she returned home she broke down again. During the inquest she lay with her eyes closed the formal statement said.

Testimony Secret

The testimony of three other witnesses was not disclosed. They were Walker Dr Fred Willner who attended Reynolds and Blanche Yurka New York actress who was a guest of Miss Holman at the time of the shooting.

She was expected to relate details of a gay party which broke up only a few minutes before the shooting.

Coroner Dalton immediately after the death called it a suicide but Sheriff Transou Scott failing to find a motive refused to drop the investigation.

The only possible suicide motive advanced so far has been the rumor according to the coroner that Reynolds and his wife had a marital rift a few days ago when Reynolds learned she was of Jewish extraction.

Romance, Tragedy in Brief Career

WINSTON SALEM N C July 9

The truth of the old bromide that riches do not always bring happiness was never more poignantly illustrated than by the tragic death of Smith Reynolds scion and heir of the multi-millionaire tobacco family.

Reynolds was born with the proverbial silver spoon in his mouth. From the day of his birth the power of almost unlimited wealth was used to shield him from the hardships of the world. He was never sent to a public school like other boys but was educated by a private tutor until he came of age to enter an exclusive preparatory school at Woodberry Va.

Takes Up Aviation

On leaving this school young Reynolds did not go to college but began to interest himself in aviation an expensive hobby in which he could afford to indulge being in receipt of an allowance of $50,000 a year. The young tobacco scion first received widespread publicity when at the age of 18 he married Miss Anne Cannon of Concord N C in a runaway marriage at York S C, in November 1929.

Despite the arrival of a baby daughter to bless the union the couple were never really happy and finally they went their separate ways via the Reno divorce mill in 1931 Reynolds setting up a trust fund of $1,000,000 for his ex-wife and baby.

In 1930 too Reynolds had his first taste of the world's hardship when he was sentenced to five months imprisonment in England for manslaughter after a collision between his high powered car and a motorcycle that resulted in the death of the latter.

The marriage of Reynolds to the famous Broadway torch singer Miss Libby Holman was announced in New York last May after the couple had been secretly married for some time in Honolulu. It is said that Reynolds had telephoned from ... where he had left his wife and baby to seek divorce threatening to end his life if Miss Holman refused to marry him.

Native of Cincinnati

The singer one of the most beautiful women of the American stage was born in Cincinnati in 1906 and was four years her husband's senior. The daughter of a lawyer and a graduate of the University of Cincinnati she was preparing for a law career until an operation on her throat which resulted in ... her voice to that plaintive ... that made her the sensation of the musical comedy stage.

He would have inherited $20,000,000 on reaching the age of 28 but only a smaller fortune of his own of which Miss Holman as his widow will receive part.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS O, July 9 — One man was shot and killed and another wounded early today during an attempt to hold up a taxicab driver. Henk Wilkins the driver told police he shot the men, both Negroes, when one of them pulled a gun after entering the cab.

The dead man was identified as George Rainey 22, of Columbus. Nine hours after the attempted holdup police arrested his brother Adell, 23. He had been shot through the left lung. Authorities said the men had been suspected in 20 taxi holdups.

WOMAN, 67, SLIDES TO BRIEF FREEDOM

By The Associated Press

MARYSVILLE, O, July 9—An aged Toledo woman, serving a term in the Marysville penitentiary, enjoyed a few hours of liberty today.

The woman, Mary Griffith, 67, escaped from a second story window of the prison by sliding down a rope of bed sheets. She was captured two hours later ... [illegible]

WHEN BERLIN GREETED FLIERS

Radioed to New York this picture shows the arrival of the American round-the-world fliers at the Tempelhof airport, Berlin Germany. This was their first stop since leaving Harbor Grace Newfoundland in the attempt to shatter the Post-Gatty record made last summer. Bennett Griffin is marked 1 and his co-pilot, Jimmie Mattern is indicated 2. The flying Magellans only paused at the German capital to refuel and give their plane Century of Progress a quick checkover before continuing their flight, which ended when their plane crashed in Russia.

Two Committees Outline Plans at Council Meet

Groups Headed by A C Queen and R T Lewis Given Authority To Proceed with Programs Executive Committee Approves Proposals

Two committees of the Council of 100 last night were given approval of the executive committee to proceed with programs of work when the committee met at White Oaks farm.

All plans of the committees of the council will be submitted to the executive committee for approval before they are carried out.

Committees on patronage of home industries (retail and wholesale) headed by A C Queen and on civic pride headed by Ralph T Lewis were then granted permission to proceed with definite programs.

Mr Queen explained the committee's plan to circulate a questionnaire among Marion industrial wholesale and probably retail men to obtain answers to the following questions: What products do you manufacture which are used by other concerns in Marion? What products do you job or wholesale which are retailed by Marion merchants? What proportion of their requirements do these Marion manufacturers buy in Marion? Do the Marion concerns who you think could buy their products from you as satisfactorily as outside of Marion? Are there any Marion products manufactured or which are jobbed which you could purchase in preference to out of town supply house if satisfactory arrangement could be made? What can be done to create patriotism among Marion citizens toward Marion stores?

In answers to this questionnaire the committee hopes to obtain information that will serve as a guide to stimulate patronage of locally manufactured and locally sold products.

Chairman Ralph T Lewis was authorized to proceed in any way he saw necessary in a program to develop loyalty of local residents toward their city. To make more Marion boosters and to keep residents from knocking their city will be among the efforts to be made by the committee. Chairman Lewis indicated that he will seek the co-operation of civic committees of the Chamber of Commerce the Rotary and the Kiwanis clubs.

The committee also discussed tentative plans of other council committees.

DICKEY OUT FOR 31 DAYS; FINED $1,000

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO July 9 — Catcher Bill Dickey of the New York Yankees today was fined $1,000 and suspended until August 4 for his attack on Carl Reynolds, Washington outfielder.

The fine was one of the severest ever levied on a major league player although the suspension, totaling 31 days from the day Dickey cracked Reynolds' jaw, was not as long as that demanded by Clark Griffith president of the Washington club. Griffith demanded that Dickey be kept out of the game until Reynolds was able to return to the game.

SALVAGE OPERATIONS TO COMMENCE SOON

However, Slight Hopes Held for Safety of Men in Sunken Sub.

By The Associated Press

CHERBOURG France July 9—The Italian salvage ships Artiglio and Rostro prepared today to attempt what many experts considered the almost impossible—the salvage of the sunken French submarine Prometheé and the rescue of her crew if any of them is alive.

The two salvage ships arrived at 10 a m and proceeded directly to the arsenal to take on equipment for the rescue attempt.

Vice Admiral Le Bris chief of the maritime prefecture said this morning it would be a most difficult task. At the depth the submarine is lying about 245 feet below the surface the divers will be working in pitch darkness he said.

"But we will first try to pass chains about the hull to permit the use of lifting gear and it might also be possible to drag the submarine to shallower water."

A nine knot current in the channel also hampered the rescue work. It was believed however that if anything could be done the Artiglio and Rostro could do it and hope prevailed that it would be possible at least for the divers to attach air pipes to the sockets in the hull to keep the men alive until a large scale refloating operation was possible.

There was no craft in this harbor with apparatus to send down a diver.

AMERICAN SLAIN BY CHINESE BANDITS

By The Associated Press

SHANGHAI July 9—The slaying of William Simpson an American missionary and a Russian named Horvath by Chinese bandits reported from Lanchow last week, was confirmed today.

Simpson was attached to the Assemblies of God mission. He and Horvath were slain June 21 while on their way from Pingliang to Lanchow. 15,000 mounted irregular Mohammedan soldiers. They were slaughtered without warning and their truck was plundered.

After the slaying the soldiers held up a second truck taking 25,000 Mexican dollars belonging to the governor of the province. They shot six of the guards on this truck and buried two others alive, then fled into the mountain fastnesses.

LEAGUE TO DISCUSS THIRD PARTY PLANS

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND O July 9—With a platform designed to cure the country's economic defects delegates of the league for Independent Political Action assembled here today.

Formation of a formidable third party in national politics as a means of accomplishing the league's objectives was one of the prime topics of the convention discussion.

Leaders said the group probably would indorse Norman T. Thomas, the Socialist candidate for president but would stand on its own platform.

Economic and social problems were the chief subjects dealt with in the program prohibition being given only small attention.

Director of Chautauqua Chorus Famous Musician

D Evelyn Davies is the celebrated director of the Welsh Imperial Singers who will inaugurate the 1932 Marion Chautauqua season Sunday night July 24 at the Chautauqua pavilion in Garfield park

The Singers considered the outstanding number of the program were selected by the program committee as a fitting group to deliver the Sunday night program for which union services will be dismissed

Known Internationally

Mr Davies is known internationally and in the United States is particularly well known on the Pacific coast He has conducted some of the largest musical festivals in the country the largest of all being the festival held at Stanford university stadium in California where he conducted a chorus of 10,000 voices accompanied by six full bands. Mme Schumann Heink and he were the soloists on a program that was heard by 50,000 persons

For many years he has held the distinction of being one of the most prominent tenor soloists and choral directors of the British Isles His first visit to the United States was in 1908 when he became leading soloist with the Filipino Constabulary band at Atlantic City

When he became interested in Welsh singing he went to Wales and toured the country in search for its best voices His chorus captured Wales with its singing and he knew it was ready for the London debut At Aeolian hall in London its appearance was a sensational success Leading musical critics acclaimed the singers

It took the chorus three years to fill all of its engagements in the British Isles singing in many places three and four times It was the same in Canada

Hit of Rotary

When Rotary International was searching for a distinctive musical attraction for its silver anniversary convention in Chicago in 1931 the Canadian Rotarians suggested the Welsh Imperial Singers Howard H Feighner convention manager wrote of them Having had considerable to do with our conventions both in America and Europe it is difficult to recall a musical organization appearing before our convention that has been quite as outstanding as your magnificent group of male voices

H R H Duke of York at their royal appearance in London exclaimed A wonderful party A credit to Wales Lloyd George in a speech during the intermission of the Welsh Imperial concert said pointing to the director Mr Davies I have heard the greatest choral singers of the world This band of singers is different Old melodies were new tonight because they were in the hands of a master

Tour of Scenic Interest Proposed for Auto Trip

A tour of scenic interest through Marysville, London Circleville Lancaster Granville and Delaware has been suggested for next week end by Mrs D V Gallagher secretary of the Marion Auto club

The trip comes within a few miles of Buckeye lake which may appeal to a number of the tourists

The route proposed by Mrs Gallagher lies over route 4 to the south to Marysville route 31 to the southeast from Marysville to New California route 42 from New California to London Three miles northwest of London on route 56 is located the London prison farm where many Ohio penitentiary prisoners are housed

Beautiful scenery abounds along the drive from London by way of route 56 to the south of Mt Sterling and Circleville Follow route 22 to the east from Circleville to Lancaster the center of several scenic and interesting spots. In Lancaster is located the birthplace of William T Sherman Mt. Pleasant a scenic spot is located just north of Lancaster Jacob's ladder a natural formation is located southwest of the city

Follow route 37 northward from Lancaster to Granville Persons interested in visiting Buckeye lake should turn right on route 157 at a point 10 miles north of Lancaster Those continuing to Granville by way of route 37 may visit Denison university campus in the city and opossum mound a prehistoric effigy mound just east of Granville on route 16.

The most direct route from Granville to Marion lies over route 37 northward Alexandria Johnstown Sunbury and Delaware and route 23 from Delaware to Marion

Man Saved from Death Under Train by Woman

A Marion man according to persons who were in the vicinity of the C & O crossing on Bellefontaine avenue Monday night owes the fact that he is alive today to the presence of mind of a Harding High school teacher The teacher is credited with saving him from being crushed beneath the wheels of a C & O passenger train

According to the witnesses the man whose identity was not learned had apparently taken his Fourth of July celebration in liquid form was shooed from the tracks which he had stood swaying back and forth just as the train rushed by

The story of the rescue as told by the witness was that the young woman who declined to give her name for publication was riding with her mother on Bellefontaine avenue As they reached the C & O crossing they were stopped by a southbound freight train traveling on the east track As they stood waiting for the freight to pass they were horrified to see the intoxicated man stagger on the west track just as the passenger train coming from the opposite direction whistled for the crossing

Cries from the crossing watchman went unheeded The guard was unable to leave his post in the center of the street because approaching automobiles which would have swept on the tracks in front of the oncoming train as the freight train cleared the crossing The man continued to weave back and forth on the track as the train approached.

The young woman grasping the situation jumped from her automobile and running to the crossing attempted to drive the man back by crying a warning Too intoxicated to appreciate what was going on the stranger stared at her blankly and made no effort to get off of the track Waving her arms frantically the young woman pleaded with the man to get off the track Just as she reached out to drag the man from the track he staggered to safety In a moment the train flashed over the crossing

The man was still unable to grasp what had taken place when told in no uncertain terms by the watchman following the incident He continued on his way unmindful of the close call he had had

NEW MOTOR PLACED IN CITY FIRE TRUCK

Replaces Engine Damaged Several Months Ago. Expected To Last 15 Years.

The new engine purchased by the city for the pumper at the central fire station has arrived and is being installed by J B Nazel mechanic with the assistance of the firemen

The motor is said to be the last word in motor construction It is rated at 125 horsepower but is capable of 150 according to the manufacturer With the installation of the new engine Fire Chief F J McFarland said the pumper will be practically as good as new and should serve the city for 12 or 15 years with out any great additional expense

The engine formerly in use was put out of commission when a crankshaft broke while the department was responding to a false alarm several months ago The pumper has been repainted and decorated by the firemen The lettering was done by L W Miller

14 Drivers Tagged.

Fourteen traffic violators were served with tags by the police during the week a check of the traffic docket in municipal court showed today The offenders were divided into two groups those who parked over time in a restricted zone and those who drove with improper lights Eight were tagged for the former offense and six for the latter One motorist was assessed a fine of $1

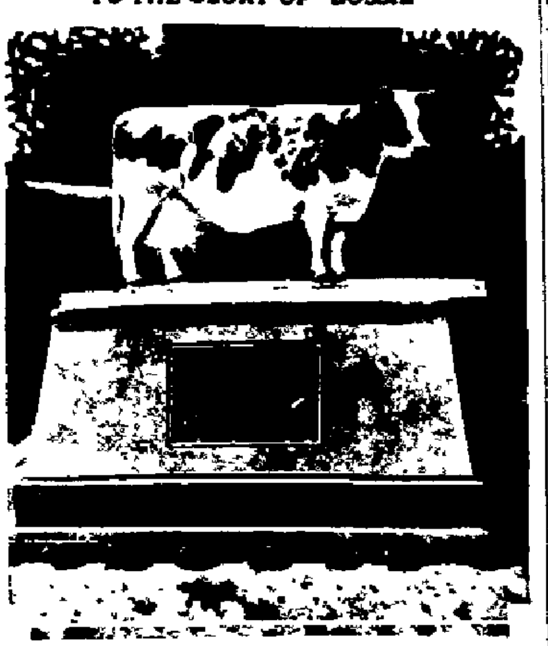
TO THE GLORY OF "BOSSIE"



Here is what is believed to be the only memorial to a cow ever erected. It is one quarter larger than the original herself and the base of the monument bears a plaque calling attention to the feats of the remarkable bovine. In each of two years she exceeded 16,000 quarts of milk and 1,400 pounds of butter fat, her two year total being 33,972 quarts of milk and 2,865.18 pounds of butter. The cow was born in 1915 and died in 1925. She is thus immortalized at Seattle.

Board Plans To Spend $182,392 on Bucyrus Schools in Next Term

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS July 9 — Slashing $32,000 from bond and general expenses for the coming school year, the local board of education Friday night adopted its 1932-33 school budget calling for expenditures of $182,392.50.

Last year's budget called for $214,000, a decrease of $9,000 under the previous year.

Of the total amount of the budget $73,542.50 is for bond and interest, $108,850 for general operating expenses divided as follows: $75,000 for teachers, $15,000 for operating expenses, $9,000 for administration and $10,000 for miscellaneous expenses.

A resolution was adopted asking for an advance draw of $15,500 from the county auditor on the August tax settlement. The money will be used to meet current bills totaling $637 and the balance to be held for other expenses.

DAVID W. WEST ENDS LIFE IN BASEMENT

Worry Over Financial Matters Said To Be Cause of Act.

David W West, 54, of 706 Darling street, hanged himself yesterday afternoon in the basement of his home. Despondency over financial troubles is believed by the family to have led him to take his life.

Mr West, a blacksmith at the Marion Steam Shovel Co for 34 years, had not been regularly employed for some time. The suicide was the second in the family within three years. His son, Stanley West, 22, hanged himself three years ago.

Mrs West found the body hanging by a wire clothesline from a beam. Mr West did not appear to be troubled when he came home at noon and when she missed him about 1 p m she began a search of the house and gardens.

Mrs West and her brother, Rex Mc..., who lives at the West home, were in the upstairs of the house during the time that Mr West took his life.

Besides his widow he leaves a daughter, Mrs Louise Williams of Darling street, and two brothers, Jesse West of near Magnetic Springs and Albert West of Williamsport, Ind.

Mr West was born Sept 20, 1877, at Dover, O, to Charles and Fleta Carpenter West. He was married Jan 24, 1900, in Delaware to Selena McComb of Magnetic Springs.

The funeral will be conducted Monday at 2:30 p m at the home with Rev T C Palmer of Epworth Memorial Baptist church officiating. Burial will be made in Marion cemetery. Friends may view the body at the home after 6 tonight.

Worthy of Generous Support.

Next Tuesday the third annual garden party of the Marion Woman's Hospital Board will be held. This is one of the most important events on the year's program of community activities here for it is planned to help finance a decidedly important project.

Funds obtained from the garden party are used to help pay the expenses of the baby clinic which has been established at the City hospital. Through the operation of this clinic infants lacking in some of the essentials for proper growth and development are provided with care and treatment intended to supply their deficiencies. They are placed on the path that will give them the start in life to which they are entitled.

That the baby clinic is filling a long felt need here is evident from the large number of mothers who are taking their tiny boys and girls there to give them the advantage of the expert attention that is available.

Sponsorship of this branch of the City hospital is just one of the many beneficial activities of the Woman's board. Without the services performed by this organization it is altogether likely that Marion's hospital would lack some of the equipment and departments that contribute to its present state of efficiency. The splendid service this organization has performed possibly would have come from other sources had these women not taken the task in hand, but that is by no means certain. Women, rather than men are usually the first to recognize the vital importance of such things and also the first to start on the road toward accomplishment.

For all that has been done and will be done in the future the Woman's Hospital Board is not seeking praise or applause. Woman's reward for helping others—and that is the role she usually fills in life—is almost invariably the joy and satisfaction gained from the service, and that is the case with the Woman's Hospital Board.

But the organization does invite and wish the hearty support of all citizens in its efforts to help maintain the City hospital so that it will yield a maximum of benefit to the community. This support should be forthcoming at all times without urging. Those who help in this most worthy enterprise are contributing to an institution in which every citizen is actually a part owner. So even to those of selfish tendencies there ought to be conditions to encourage and aid every hospital project. Fortunately though comparatively few are that tight fisted and self centered. Like the women of the Hospital board the large majority of people are interested in having the hospital equipped and maintained so that it will do the greatest possible amount of good for everybody and function as a real community institution.

Next week's garden party of the Woman's Hospital Board will give citizens of Marion a definite opportunity to provide evidence of their interest in one of the city's most important enterprises.

Signs of Revival

County fairs in Ohio, representing an institution that dates back to the state's earliest years have not acquired strength with age. Various explanations have been given and of course the most plausible seems to be that changing conditions and the modern public's tendency to prefer a different type of entertainment tell the whole story.

Along with this explanation though it might be added that there is a possibility of fair managements having followed the wrong course. In some respects they have attempted to conform to the modern taste and desires by modernizing the fair. That may have been a mistake. The future will decide for now many fair boards are planning to place their programs back on an old fashioned basis and make them largely home enterprises.

Professional entertainers are to be relegated to the background if not entirely eliminated and in their place will be athletic contests, pageants, plays and other features with only residents of the county participating.

This will offer the public a program different from any other. It will remove the county fair from the field of competition with other forms of entertainment. On its face that appears to be a sound and sensible policy and one which gives promise of rescuing this long established annual event from the decline that in recent years has threatened to end in extinction.

Youth is another new factor in the situation that adds to the hopeful outlook. Here in Marion county for instance, organization of 4-H clubs is said to have assured a Junior fair for 1932 that will be about twice the size of the one last year. Hundreds of boys and girls are aligned with this rapidly growing movement and many of them will be participants in this year's fair program. This means that their relatives and friends will be more than ordinarily interested in the fair and will enlist the interest of others.

All in all the prospects for maintaining the county fair as a going and thriving institution appear brighter now than for a number of years past. If those in charge will hold to the idea of offering the public something in the way of entertainment and recreation that is different and can not be found elsewhere there is reason to believe that permanent success will be their reward. In striving toward that end they should by all means continue to invite and encourage participation of the enthusiastic farm boys and girls and their organizations. It probably would be wise and advisable, in fact, to give them a larger share, with their energetic bodies and minds, in the place in the fair arrangement.

A Good Democrat.

An unsmiling Alfred E. Smith telling representatives of the press that he will support the Roosevelt-Garner ticket because he represents the Democratic party and because he is heartily sick of the Republican party, is not a pleasant subject upon which to speculate. A great many things have happened since Al Smith and his brown derby went campaigning in 1928.

Mr. Smith is still a real Democrat. No honest thinker ever took stock in rumors that he would head a third party, throw his support to the Republicans or even sulk in his tent while Candidate Roosevelt tried to win the war. A former presidential candidate scarcely would be expected to act like that. Alfred E. Smith would be decidedly out of character in any of the three roles.

He knows that it is the consensus among political observers that he is on the downgrade and traveling fast as far as national influence is concerned. He is familiar with the statement that the Democratic convention of 1932 allowed itself to get more interested in repudiating its candidate of 1928 than in selecting its best man for 1932. No one needed to explain to him that when William Gibbs McAdoo swung California over to Roosevelt on the fourth ballot he was evening up an old score that got lopsided in 1924 when the McAdoo candidacy was wrecked by Smith with far more disastrous personal effect than this year's wreck of the Smith stop Roosevelt program by McAdoo.

If any politician ever had reason to be bitter, Alfred E. Smith could be excused for refusing to give even tacit approval to the Roosevelt-Garner ticket. However no one ever expected Mr. Smith to act like an ordinary politician. Without any personal enthusiasm perhaps, he will support his party. What else could he do?

The Expert.

When an individual claims he knows more about a certain subject than his neighbors and they can't prove that he doesn't he calls himself an expert.

If the individual manages his affairs astutely, setting a proper price on his judgment and holding one finger up in the wind to keep himself informed about public opinion he turns his title into money.

He is called into consultation in important cases. He is asked to speak, to write, to bless the ignorant masses with a benediction of knowing words.

Two such men were Graham McNamee and Charles Francis Coe, radio announcer and novelist, respectively by vocation and both experts by avocation—boxing experts. They were getting away with it up to the night of the Schmeling-Sharkey championship fight. Then something happened.

In their best manner they glibly expertized a blow by blow description of the bout for uncounted and unpaying millions of radio listeners. They left not the slightest doubt concerning what transpired. Schmeling had given Sharkey, the challenger, a bad beating. The heavyweight crown of the fistic kingdom had not changed hands.

The referee and the judges had a different opinion. They gave an unpopular decision to Sharkey. The New York boxing commission under whose jurisdiction the fight was held, agreed. So did some sports writers—also experts. But the damage had been done. Thanks to Messrs. McNamee and Coe the radio ringsiders were positive that dirty work had been done at the crossroads.

Sequel: Only boxing experts will be permitted to broadcast descriptions of fights in New York in the future, says the mighty boxing commission.

Moral: A boxing expert in New York is a fellow who agrees with the commission. Too bad Mr. McNamee and Mr. Coe about you and Schmeling all losing your titles in the same ring the same evening.

Comment of the Press

LAST HALF

Dear old 1932, upon which the world started six months ago with mingled hopes and misgiving, is now half gone, and a middling good start has been made on the second and last half. So far the year has brought no particular surprises and even the disappointments which have come were for the most part anticipated.

The pessimist looking around finds a great deal of material upon which to work. It may be said that he is throwing himself heart and soul and breath into the work of spreading gloom and predicting disaster. Everything is wrong from his point of view. He predicts calamity. Daily Guide to Health

BY DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

Give Baby Proper Food, Sunshine and Air.

Defective development of the skeleton is the cause of many abnormal conditions found in the bony system. At birth the bones are in an immature state. They are composed largely of cartilage, a gristly like substance through which there are small areas of earthy material.

The soft portions of the bone gradually become hardened by the deposit of lime and phosphorus, so that at the age of twenty five years the bony structure of the body has reached perfection. From then until fifty there is little change in the bones but after the age of fifty they become thinner, lighter and more brittle.

Defects of the bones in babyhood and youth are due to some deficiency in the diet and as the result of improper diet rickets is very common. In this disease the bones are abnormally soft, causing various deformities of which pigeon breast and bow legs are the most characteristic.

The symptoms of rickets are not particularly definite, vague pains in the spine, knee or hip being the most common.

Thanks to the great progress made in medicine the extremely disfiguring deformities or crooked back which used to be so common are rarely seen today. The general public has learned that sunshine, fresh air, cod liver oil and a well balanced diet, including the vitamins are of value in treating this disease.

Tuberculosis of the bones is a disease of childhood occurring commonly from the third to the eighth year. Robust children are seldom attacked. In frequent instances tuberculosis occurs in several members of the same family.

Whooping cough or measles unless checked in the early stages deplete the vital forces and predispose the young child to infection.

"Pott's disease" is tuberculosis of the spine. Hip joint disease is tuberculosis of the hip. When the hip is involved the pain is usually in the knee. "Starting pains" as they are called occur mostly at night and are caused by a muscular spasm. Parents sometimes diagnose these night disorders as "growing pains" but if the pains are coupled with a slight lameness that seems to grow progressively worse there should be no delay in consulting a competent physician.

Treatment directed towards raising the nutrition of the patient to the highest point is important. The local treatment must be carried on by a surgeon.

Broken bones in children and in adults show certain marked differences. In immaturely formed bones the injury does not completely sever the two ends of the fracture, merely breaking certain parts of the bone and bending other parts. The technical name for this is "green stick fracture," because it is so like the incomplete result when one tries to break a green twig.

In a person of advanced years a fracture is usually serious for the lack of vitality in the aged often keeps the parts of the injured bone from reuniting. The angle of the bones in the hip joint is altered in old age which is the reason we find so many fractured hips in persons of advanced age.

Recent reports show that slowly uniting fracture at any age may be aided by a nutritious diet, proper use of the mercury lamp and the administration of cod liver oil.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

A. A. I. Q.—I have a tubercular person in the home and I would like to know a good disinfectant.

A.—Your druggist will recommend a good one. Soap and water used with the idea of keeping everything clean will serve very well indeed. (Copyright 1932 King Features Syndicate Inc.)

Highlights of Ohio History

BY E. H. GALBRAITH

WHO FIRST PHRASED IT?

The first words favoring the prohibition of slavery in the Ohio territory came from David Howell. He wrote them in a letter from Annapolis Feb. 21, 1784 to Jonathan Arnold. Both men were members of the Continental congress and Howell was a member of a committee engaged in preparing a bill for the government and general rule of the new territory and was giving Arnold an idea of what the committee had in mind.

He mentioned the principal features of the bill under four heads, the third of which follows: "After the year 1800 there shall be no slavery in any of said states nor involuntary servitude other than in punishment for crime."

Howell was one of the most scholarly men in the colonies. He was trained for the law but went early into educational work and was a college professor in his own state of New Jersey and later in Rhode Island. He was a wit and a sage and was equally at home in legislative halls, in courts of justice and in a college lecture room.

New York Day by Day

BY O. O. McINTYRE

New York, July 9.—Pardon the wild gleam, scratched cheek and torn [illegible] but I've been repairing the hall clock. It came out of a Second avenue auction room and has stood in the back hall since acting perfectly [illegible]. It isn't a cuckoo clock but it might as well be.

Something irked about everything you can think of happened to it the third [illegible]. When it was 10 o'clock it would strike 11. And at 8 p. m. it would skip two hours forward two hours, [illegible] lock a while, give out a buzz and the hands would begin to whirl. Hold 'em Yale.

When company came and we would run out of things to do we'd all go out and watch the clock. And also throw [illegible]. Every once in a while the Sealyham who sleeps in the back hall, as he learns a few [illegible] would bark wildly. And we'd all know the clock was putting on an act.

This has been going on for almost a year come autumn and has been the talk of the neighborhood. In fact at the [illegible] morning musicals and Afternoon Delphians I was pointed out in whispers as the idiot who owned the clown clock. They didn't know half.

That giant [illegible] ticker has come within an inch of breaking up an otherwise happy home. Every time I would suggest giving it to the Pot Bunkerth [illegible] tossing it in the ash can my wife would plead for just one more chance. You'd think there was something between [illegible].

Clocks, she would philosophize are a good deal like human beings. They'll be erratic all of a sudden and just as suddenly settle down and run smoothly for years. After which she would look at me and for some reason or other I'd blaze red. Or as Walter Catlett says "blood the cheek."

• • •

Once a week I'd patiently wind it with a big brass key and hope for the best. But no dice. Not a week passed that it didn't offer something entirely new. Toward the last instead of striking a rich clear tone it would gasp like a calico pony with the heaves. Is that silly or not? And finally one midnight it gave out a weird bellow and ticked its last.

• • •

At intervals I'd sneak out to look it over, standing rather expectant, as though expecting it to say "Boo" or for the pendulum to swing out and whack me right over the head. Finally [illegible] of being bluffed by a [illegible] this morning I decided [illegible] into its innards and see [illegible] could see. I laid it [illegible] the workshop floor and [illegible] its face. I got this far in [illegible] experimentations when [illegible] popped in with two ladies [illegible] boy friend [illegible] one who "has joined the Fix You [illegible] Movement." Steve was straightening up, pulling his gun barrel out of the pane. Jerry's breath whistled between his tight-clenched teeth. They were clear. Missed a collision by fractions of an inch.

"Get ...?" he demanded.

"I dunno. I sure hope so." It was all of a night's work to the detective.

The monoplane was flying level again. Jerry banked hard over to return to the attack. The dark bulk of the other ship became visible. The pilot slapped his companion on the back.

"Look!" he shouted. "They're gliding."

The amphibian, her exhaust streaming flame, was gliding in a long thin quarter turn, her pilot obviously trying to reach the sandy beach of the mainland. Jerry measured the distance with his eye. Yes, they might make it. He must beat them to it. With his own engine full on he too swung toward shore in a terrific power dive, hoping against hope that he would find the beach suitable for a landing.

Jerry dived past the slowly gliding ship. With his own night lights on, the wide open the monoplane was covering two feet to the amphibian's one. Down, down, with the wind whistling through the struts, the entire fabric shrieking to the banshee shriek of the motor. There was no time to drag the beach to find out whether the sand was hard or soft. It didn't matter. He closed the throttle and pivoted the plane around on her wing tip. As the fat balloon tires struck the sand the heavy ship lurched and faltered. Jerry braced himself, thinking that she was about to dig in and turn over. Then she rolled heavily to a stop.

Jerry leaped to the sand before Stevens had opened the door on the other side. The amphibian had just landed on the water forty or fifty feet from shore and was now drifting in toward the beach under the forward momentum of its glide. With engine dead and its crew silent it looked like a black ghost ship in the night.

Jerry, in a cold sweat of impatience, could not wait for her to reach the beach. He waded out into the dark water, his hands itching to wrap themselves around Lucci's throat.

"One shot out of that gun," came Stevens' calm voice from the beach, "and I'll give you the works."

There was no reply. The plane, its forward way almost lost, was inching steadily toward the shore. The water was now up to Jerry's waist.

"Throw your machine-gun overboard." The detective's voice carried far across the still water. "I want to hear it splash."

Still that eerie silence hung over everything. Jerry felt a tingle run through every nerve end. The air seemed full of static electricity, like the breathless moment between a sharp flash of lightning and the resultant clap of thunder. He pushed ahead through the water, then, all restraint gone, plunged forward and began to swim with a powerful crawl stroke. Somewhere in that drifting black ship was Nancy. He had told her Lucci should not have her. Once he put his two hands on that guy nothing in the world could break his hold. A dozen more feet and he'd be able to clamber aboard. They had machine guns and automatics, but he did not care.

A vivid sheet of flame from the amphibian's bow split the darkness over his head. It was instantly reflected in a stabbing fire from the shore. The air seemed filled with twanging bullets and the sound of crackling wood. The reverberations from the machine-gun fire died away into silence, utter and absolute.

Jerry's groping hand found a wet strut. He jerked himself out of the water and scrambled up the slippery side of the drifting plane. He swung a dripping foot over the cockpit wall. There was only one dark face there. He reached for it with clutching hands.

"I give up," the pilot screamed. It was not Lucci's voice.

His fingers met at the man's throat. His thumbs clamped down, pressing deep into yielding flesh. The man staggered back. Jerry stepped after him, stumbled on something soft and lost his grip. There was a heavy splash. The man had jumped overboard. Jerry could hear the sound of his strokes as he swam toward shore. Frenziedly Jerry looked for Lucci. He heard Stevens' voice.

"Where's Lucci?"

The swimming man answered.

"On the floor of the cockpit. Him and Sam. You got 'em both."

"And her $150,000 shot to hell," moaned Stevens. "Money goes awful quick around here."

Jerry clattered down the two steps into the darkness of the commodious compartment within the fuselage.

"Is that you, Jerry?" Nancy's voice was brave.

"Yes," he said briefly, choking back the rush of words that came to his lips. What use to try to keep his thoughts away from her, to try to ignore her very existence? He had loved her ever since he had first looked into her eyes, candid and level as a boy's, back there on the Merrick road. He clenched his teeth to prevent himself from telling her while she waited so silently for him to find her there in the inky darkness. His wife. That spoiled it all, for had he not promised to have it annulled? How could he tell her that he loved her now, when her heart would be warm with gratitude toward him? And when they were back in New York she would be Nancy Wentworth, not the helpless, frightened little girl of the tropics, but the self-reliant, light-hearted musical comedy star.

His groping hands touched hers. They were ice cold and clutched his own convulsively.

"Nancy," he whispered, "are you all right?"

There was a moment of silence.

"Yes, Jerry," she replied calmly. "Except that my ankles are bound and I am tied to this seat."

His skillful hands untied the knots and unstrapped the safety buckle. He could feel her breath on his cheek as he bent over her to help her to her feet. She would never know the struggle he was making to keep himself from seizing her in his arms and smothering that glorious red mouth with his kisses. His wife! What a joke.

"What are you laughing at?" she demanded.

"I'm not laughing," he snapped shortly. "Let's get ashore."

Emory fingered his trigger impatiently as he watched men scuttle from the shelter of one palm to that of the next, always working closer and closer to the house. Dr. Tibberington, looking absurdly undignified, crept across the littered floor of the living room and placed a tall glass beside the elbow of each of the defenders.

"Happy landings, Ashie." Emory nodded, catching the cripple's eye. Ashwood's face was transformed. No longer mocking and cynical, it was wiped clean of its hard lines and seemed twenty years younger.

"Cheerio, old top. Here's to the next war." Ashwood drank deep.

Emory stared over the barricade. The attackers were making their way forward with infinite caution, taking advantage of every tree trunk, every clump of palmetto and sawgrass.

Mind Did It, Says Elinor Glyn

By The Associated Press

BUDAPEST — Elinor Glyn has discovered the fountain of youth.

As proof that Ponce de Leon took the wrong path she points to her lack of wrinkles, to the still flaming coils of her red hair and to the fact that she is the grandmother of five children.

The woman who gave "it" a new significance in the English language credits only half of her present good health to the mud baths which she takes here. She says the other half of the battle against Father Time must be won in the mind.

"What does it matter," she asks, "how long a woman has lived on this earth if her mind has not grown dull?"

Mrs. Glyn chose Hungary for the setting of one of her novels and Hungarian aristocrats noted for their charm and hospitality have made a heroine of her.

Yet what she declares to have been two of the most thrilling moments of her life came on a recent visit to Elizabethtown, a workman's suburb of Budapest.

She attended a religious drama presented by a cast 80 per cent of whom were unemployed, to raise funds for a new church. As a prologue four trumpeters heralded a lovely young girl in national costume who welcomed Mrs. Glyn with a speech in French. The guests replied they never had any experience [illegible] such a [illegible] to her [illegible].

After the play, as she passed between lines of [illegible] costumes, one of them unpinned from his hat a plume of feathers, grass and handed it to her.

The gesture and the manner of its execution, she declared, was worthy of any of her [illegible].

Ronald Spies on Brixton's Every Move To Help the Search

WHAT lay behind the truculent announcement of Samuel Brixton that he meant the first thing in the morning to tackle the man from whom Brock had obtained the description of the car in which Marion and Carolyn had been taken away?

I knew that I was not alone in mentally asking that question. It was so bizarre a suspicion, obsessing us all, that of Samuel Brixton's complicity in the kidnaping of his own stepdaughter and Marion, that I for one was glad to catch at any straw indicating his innocence. Surely this apparent anxiety to trace the ownership of the kidnaper's car was no index finger pointing to his guilt. Yet something in my father's unhurried tones as he answered told me that his opinion of the man was unchanged.

Ronald Will Watch Him

"I must beg of you, Mr. Brixton, not to go near this man," he said earnestly. "We have taken every precaution to avoid publicity in this thing, and you have agreed with us that it is most undesirable both for our chances of recovering the girls and for their peace of mind later on.

"Brock is a past master of disguise. The man he interviewed has no suspicion that Brock was anything more than a casual acquaintance listening to idle gossip. But if a second person should talk to him on the same subject—you see, do you not?"

"Oh, I suppose so," Sam Brixton returned ungraciously. Then he rose abruptly, crossed to his wife and reached down his hands to grab hers.

"Come, darling," he said, and the tender tones of his voice could not have been recognized as coming from the same throat that had voiced the raucous, rasped utterances to which we had just been listening. "There's nothing more that can be done until morning. You must rest, even if you can't sleep."

She rose submissively, clinging to him.

"Ronald?" she said appealingly.

"Yes, mother," he said tenderly. "I'll be along in just a minute. I want to ask Noel something."

But it was not Noel to whom Ronald spoke when the sound of a closing door down the corridor signaled the entrance of the Brixtons into their own room. White-lipped, trembling, he faced my father again.

"Do you think he meant that last thing he said, or was it just a bluff?" he demanded. "Because if it wasn't a bluff, perhaps after all he isn't in this."

My throat went dry at the anguished doubt in the boy's voice, and my father's eyes were filled with compassion as he gave reluctant answer to Ronald's cry.

"That is something we cannot possibly tell at this time, Ronald," he said. "We all hope with you that he knows nothing of this, but as we cannot be sure, we must watch his movements carefully. Now—there is no one among us—" He stopped, and we all realized his reluctance to ask the boy to spy upon the movements of the only father he ever had known.

"I am among you," Ronald returned. "I have been watching his every movement, and I shall go on with my—spying. It is—horrible—but it is my sister in the hands of those kidnapers — my sister and Marion."

We all understood as Harry Underwood's big hand was on his shoulder. "Yours is the hardest task of all, but it must be performed. Better cut along now, or your mother will be sending for you."

"I'll stay down in the lobby until the last lounger gets out around midnight," Noel volunteered. "If you want me for anything, Ron, just phone down and I'll be up the next minute."

"Thank you, old man," Ronald said gratefully as he went out of the door, and Noel was almost at his heels.

Veritzen's 'Touchiness'

"I'll just go along down now, if you don't need me," he said. Harry Underwood waited only until the door had closed behind him before addressing my father.

"When do you want us, Chief, and where?"

"Over at the school about 11 o'clock," my father said promptly. "That will give Richard and me time to get hold of Hugh."

"Philip Veritzen [illegible] and I [illegible] but what Mrs. Lucci would [illegible] if his [illegible] had been [illegible]."

"[illegible] will not need me [illegible] still."

Mary's Important Task

Lillian unhurriedly put both hands on his shoulders and pushed him back into his chair.

"Why won't we need you?" she [illegible]. "Who ever thought of [illegible] not being present. But [illegible] to my father, "what are we going to do about Helena? If [illegible] get to sleep, which is [illegible] she's going to hunt for me."

My father smiled over at Mary.

"I leave our little Horatio [illegible] to hold the bridge [illegible]."

"More About Max" Is New Children's Story

ALL the children who read "Max, The Story of a Little Black Bear" have asked the same question: What happened to Max after he went to live in Yellowstone Park? And the author, [illegible] St. Clair has written "More About Max," the story of what did happen.

The first days in the park were hard for Max. He didn't know how to find food. He was frightened by the terrible black bully [illegible] which were really other black bears like himself. But even though the first lessons were difficult he learned how to make friends and how to take care of himself. He even learned to break into the tourists' automobiles to steal sugar, coffee and chocolate. Before the story ends Max finds his family again, Billy, Jane and [illegible] all Sunny, the white cub.

Two New Books for Light Reading

TWO light novels are just out: Lois Montross' edition with "Wind Before Dawn," a book about a huge and irrepressible professor and his two loves that is much more than a pure romance.

The book is supposed to say something about women and careers. And does. But more important is the writer's oneness with her fellow man and her gift for expressing sounds, sights and ideas in words.

G. B. Stern's new novel is called "Rueful Mating," and this time is concerned with two precocious children. Her great gift is vividness and even when she attains it by enameling her characters she never misses fire.

Story of Lake Country in Fall Announcement

A NARRATIVE of Events Concerning the Johnston Family of St. Mary's, by Janet Lewis, in her book "The Invasion" is a fall announcement of Harcourt Brace & Co.

All the movement of history, the adventure and the [illegible] which have been a part of America [illegible] will [illegible] mirrored in the life of the Johnston family of St. Mary's. This is the story [illegible] against the background of the changing landscape of the Great Lakes country, of the blending of two cultures, Indian and English. It begins with scenes of Indian life and the coming of the fur traders to the lake country beyond the Sault. Among these traders is John Johnston, a cultivated young Irishman who has come West to make his fortune as a trader, who married the daughter of an Ojibway chief. This is the American beginning of the Johnston family, a family that became famous through [illegible] the [illegible] over [illegible] the Ojibways [illegible] visited by every traveler.

New Books on Week's List

AMONG new books listed are "The Big Pink" by Hugh MacNair Kahler, the story of a professor who looks like a prize fighter, takes a job as a tutor to an [illegible] rich young man and his [illegible] young lady who lead him into difficulties. "Isabel" by [illegible] first novel [illegible] of a woman who gave love to those who needed it. "The Man With the Paper Skull" by Dwight Marfield, which tells the story of a [illegible] banker found dead under his desk on Halloween night on Broadway.

"October House" Is New Strahan Novel

THE author of "The Desert Moon Mystery," Kay Cleaver Strahan, has written another absorbing novel, "October House." In this the story is told by Mrs. Peters, the former [illegible] fortune teller who lets herself and her small daughter [illegible] into a series of tragic events just because she needed the money so badly. Just before taking up her work as a masseuse [illegible] this woman [illegible] did not know what Mrs. Peters told her own fortune. [illegible] would be successful in her new venture [illegible] up the first thing [illegible] water [illegible] and a sad fortune [illegible] for the latter and to the house [illegible]. The adventures at October House are delightfully told by the author who is generous with her dexterous language and comparisons.

"Indian Gold," a True Story

"INDIAN GOLD" is the true story of Joe and Ed Hampton, twin brothers who lived adventurously in the wilderness of California half a century ago. Orphans at the age of seven, they lived for many years in the cattle, Indian, mining and [illegible] country near the Nevada line. They hunted, fished and played games with Indian boys. Later they worked as cowboys, prospectors, trappers, fishermen and [illegible].

They have told their story to Colin Mack, a well known journalist who spent a summer with them in the Sierras and who has written it down almost exactly as they told it to him. The book is a publication from the Alfred A. Knopf house.

"Excess Baggage" Is Gloom-Chaser

"EXCESS BAGGAGE" by H. M. Raleigh, which E. P. Dutton & Co. published this month, is a cure for the excess gloom of these times according to the publishers. Here, they say, is a rollicking gloom healing farce which concerns the Vicar of Much Warlock who unfortunately tried to brain his bishop with the sherry decanter in the midst of an excited argument. He tried to dispose of the unconscious cleric in a great trunk, but the trunk found its way into the bedroom of a duchess. There follows a series of hilarious adventures rising to a climax in comedy.

Country Full of Jacksons, Jeffersons, Will Learns at National Conventions

BY WILL ROGERS

WELL all I know is just what I read in the papers, [illegible] lately its not as much what I read in the papers as what I [illegible] in Washington. [illegible] right out loud [illegible] perhaps have gathered from a roundabout way [illegible] held in the City of [illegible] couple of Senators [illegible] leading accounts [illegible].

Well I was drafted to [illegible]. Of course no one would [illegible] of his own free will, and [illegible] and now that they are all [illegible] I sit and think of the [illegible] Applesauce and Hooey that was spilled there you wonder that we are even doing as well as we are as a Nation.

When you think of thousands of people in a hot stuffy hall away up till the early morning hours listening to "The man I am about to nominate has the qualities of a Jackson, the statesmanship of a Jefferson and the homely common sense of an Abraham Lincoln." Then the next one nominated would have all these and then a couple of more, maby the looks of McKinley, and the oratory of Bryan. Hours on hours of that, then they would all get up and march around the hall, part would march and part would hiss or be against the ones that was marching. Then all sit down and then some local prodigy would have to make a "Seconding" speech. And go all through the same stuff the others had anything in the world to get to talk.

"Crazy" Profession

But with it all they were a good bunch. I guess just as much of that has to be. An Englishman was sitting in the Press Stand, from the worlds most liberal paper, the Manchester (England) Guardian. I just looked at him when thousands were acting like newly corralled monkeys, and wondered what he must think of this odd way of arriving at "Democracy." I talked to him. Of course he was like all well bred Englishmen, very "Discreet" and wouldent say anything against our system, but it would have been worth a lot to have had his real thoughts.

I guess there is no profession as "Crazy" as politics. Its a profession all its own. Of all the "Trades" and "Deals" and "Under Cover" happenings that go on during one of these conventions? A State Delegation is with "Their" man, but are they? Many their leaders have already sold out to some opposition man and are to deliver to him after the next ballot is taken. They "Trade" all kinds of ways. "Bring your Delegation over to me and I will give your governor the vice presidency." To another he will promise the Secretary of [illegible]ship. Then the Delegations begin to slip sometimes without [illegible] monkeying with em. Its [illegible] to string with [illegible] winner. Thats what they call getting on the Band Wagon. They know they cant get any Post Office [illegible] out of the loser, no sympathy [illegible]. They quit him so quick there is nothing left but the campaign buttons, especially at this last convention where there was a Presidential candidate to every ten voters. So naturally there was a lot of disappointed candidates.

Now you might ask "Do these fellows really think they will get somewhere?" Sure they do. There is nothing that can kill hope in a candidate. He just thinks the breaks were against him that time and that he will get it the next time.

Meet Great Folks

But at that there is a lot of humor among them and its not all unconscious. There is some pretty good kidders among our leading candidates and politicians. They kinder take it serious before the crowd but when they are kinder off in themselves in a little bunch why they can kid themselves as much as any one.

You meet some great folks at these conventions. Governors, ex-Governors, Senators, ex-Senators, all the names that you have become accustomed to in the past, and maby havent heard of in a long time, why you find em at these conventions. Its the Fourth of July celebration of national politics. Its a clam bake of big politicians. If they cant get on the delegation they come as mere spectators.

Then its becoming a great trip for the women. They slipped her the vote, and she slipped off the old Mother Hubbard and into the old "Organdie" and she is meandering her way through a solid week of gabbing. And having a great time. It gives em something to do.

Every once in awhile they allow one to on the stand to make some kind of little "Seconding" speech, or something of a minor order, but the old [illegible] leaders are pretty careful to not give em too much rope. They rather keep em like a well regulated family does the small child. Its supposed to mostly listen, and every once in awhile if a lull comes to maby ask some little inoffensive question, but never allowed full leeway. Course the women are more serious with it all. When they do get a chance they try to make the very best of it. They are generally more brief than the men. I cant tell whether thats from choice or from the fact they are always limited to just so many minutes.

But its a show that no American should miss. Its entertainment and its enlightening. It gives us a kind of an idea that most men that emerge from it with any spoils were more lucky than competent. A good campaign manager can do more than an able candidate. "Trades" makes Presidents more than ability. But as bad as we are, and as funny as we do things, we are better off than the other countries, so bring on more conventions. The bigger the noisier the crazyier the better. No nation likes noise and Hooey like we do. We are all cuckoo, but we are happy.

ROYALTY OK'S FORMER DANCER

By International News Service

LONDON—If ever the British nobility had any intention of handing the well-known frigid shoulder to Adele Astaire, the American dancer who carried off and married the eligible Lord Charles Cavendish from under the noses of an army of English debs, it has now given place to a desire to cultivate her friendship.

Miss Astaire's or rather Lady Cavendish's presentation at the recent court at Buckingham palace puts once and for all the seal of royal approval upon the marriage of the scion of British aristocracy and the American stage beauty, and tongues that may have whispered such phrases as American title huntress or tragic mesalliance must now be still under pain of royal displeasure.

Gets Royal Approval

The very fact that King George and Queen Mary received Lady Cavendish is in itself an indication that they consider her an "A-1" member of the nobility in good standing for the requirements that qualify one for presentation at court are extremely rigorous and only those who like Caesar's wife are above suspicion make the grade.

Miss Astaire made her last appearance on the American stage in The Band Wagon last March with her brother Fred and sailed for England a week later. She was married to Lord Charles Cavendish younger son of the Duke of Devonshire on May 9 in the private chapel of Chatsworth House the Devonshire home of the bridegroom's parents in the presence of the Duke and Duchess and immediate members of the family. Mrs Fred J Astaire the bride's mother gave her away.

How Romance Began

The romance between the young British blue blood and his American bride began when Lord Charles was in New York in 1929 as a clerk in the firm of J P Morgan & Co preparatory to entering business in London but in spite of the long courtship there were rumors in the English capital that the affair was not serious. Consequently the marriage came somewhat as a surprise to optimistic mammas of daughters of the marrying age who would have been transported to the seventh heaven at the prospect of having Lord Charlie for a son-in-law.

LORD CHARLES CAVENDISH
LADY CAVENDISH FORMER ADELE ASTAIRE

LORD AND LADY CAVENDISH AFTER WEDDING CEREMONY

It is but natural that the American girl would be regarded as something in the nature of an interloper by these disappointed would-be ma-in-laws so whispers began to make the rounds that all was not so well in the noble house of Devonshire. In fact that the marriage of their son to an actress and an American actress at that was not at all pleasing to the duke and duchess.

Missed Two Courts

Color was lent to these rumors when the new Lady Cavendish was not presented at any of the first two courts of the season. But the rumor mongers blinded themselves to the fact that the newlyweds were on a honeymoon tour which even bows to the king and queen must not be allowed to interrupt.

However now everything is ironed out. Adele has made her genuflection at the foot of the throne, has been smiled on by His Majesty and gracefully nodded at by the queen and no matter how it hurts the most exclusive blue bloods in the land must follow suit for who will dare refuse to follow where the king leads.

Some surprise was caused by the absence of Lady Cavendish's mother-in-law the Duchess of Devonshire from the presentation ceremonies. Tradition hath it that the duchess should have sponsored her son's wife. But it was explained that Her Grace was indisposed and unable to attend. Incidentally the duchess is mistress of the robes at court and her attendance on the queen at state functions is almost mandatory.

However Lady Cavendish was sponsored by Mabell Countess of Airlie who also took on the job of Acting Mistress of the Robes so everybody was satisfied.

Just Things

New Neighbors

MOVING into a new neighborhood affords something of a kick for the newcomers as well as diversion for the folks already established for who doesn't enjoy the mutual observation game casual on the surface but plenty thorough. Not that one cuts a hole in the blind to watch them move the furniture in and the new arrivals do not fall out a second story window getting an eyeful as the lady of the house scurries to the garbage can but there's an interest. The small town affords bigger and better chances for promoting a speedy acquaintance if you ask us for there's always the community well or perhaps the cistern has gone dry and an ice in the hole is the decision to be made as to which of the two village stores is best to purchase the groceries on time. We read something of interest along this line recently about a woman who moved into a new town and in a couple of days received a little note saying the writer was glad she had moved into the neighborhood and that it was her mother who lived next door. Best of all there was a pan of little cakes which might help out in the meal while they were so busy. We agree it does sound like a sequel to The Three Bears and even if you did promote a gesture of this kind you might be buying a pig in a poke but it does sound nice doesn't it?

Figures

FOLKS who never in their lives minded when the class in arithmetic was called forward get your thinking cap on and the rest of us will pick up our pencil and pads. How many oranges can you buy for 50 cents? Also how many quarts of milk, how much spinach and kindred vegetables will it purchase to say nothing of other splendid body building and health giving foods? Well there it is in your mind's eye or in black and white whichever class you are in—just what one ticket to the Woman's Hospital Board's garden party Tuesday will do for the babies registered in the free baby clinic sponsored by this organization at the city hospital.

Shirtwaists

A fad proclaiming the fashionableness of the shirtwaist dress brought some lively guffaws from a crowd of the [illegible] sex recently but there are those who remember when the shirtwaist girl was the last gasp in style. To be sure one was never certain after a few hours away from the looking glass that they had really stayed out even after those sticky belts were invented to preserve one's peace of mind. (The sticky belts in case you never owned one were provided with a piece of pronged steel to be anchored to the back of the waist.) The new modes are minus the pleats which really catalogued the wearer in style's realm and there is a noticeable absence of those stock collars. But nevertheless shirtwaists they are.

A new fire screen has a compartment at one end to hold sewing materials or stationery.

The LUCK GIRL

by Mary Kathryn Hanson

JESSIE, as Typist for an Author of Best-Sellers, Fell in Love With Him Through the Scenes He Portrayed—Then Came the Climax That Was Not Included in Any of His Manuscripts

JESSIE HALE typed the final line, ripped the page from the machine and scanned the finished script for mistakes. Her doelike brown eyes misted with dreams as she read:

"Her face came closer in the fireglow; her red lips moved, tremulous, waiting. Then Dick was kissing Denise, crushing her to his heart. The fire of ecstasy shot through his veins like aged wine. * * * This was love."

Jessie sighed and stacked the pages neatly. "I wonder whether writers do get a kick out of love scenes, or is it just assembling amorous phrases, building toward that happy ending?

"But I'm sure Bart Welling is different from the set, plodding type of writer. His work sparkles so. And he always lives with his head in the clouds of creation when a story is brewing. But is he different now?" pondered Jessie. "Now that he's in love himself?"

Jessie considered this soberly. "No, love hasn't changed Bart much. True, he doesn't come round so much, but he's just as jolly and democratic as ever. Not at all swelled-headish, as the writer of a best-seller might be!"

Jessie crossed to the window and gazed at the sloping tin roofs opposite, there the last leaves of autumn fluttered in red and gold confusion in the October sunshine. A flutelike horn sounded, and a sleek, autocratic roadster slid up to the curb. Bart Welling got out, followed by Elva Payne.

Jessie straightened the organdie collar of her tan jersey dress, brushed back a wayward strand of brown air and powdered her nose. Not for Bart—for he had known Jessie when she could not afford finger waves or frocks with a 5th avenue accent. But she just couldn't bear the cool, detached criticism that always lurked in Elva's hazel eyes.

With a fleeting glance at the Chippendale mirror, Jessie ran to open the door. Four flights down she heard the hall door close. And up floated Elva's petulant voice:

"Darling, why do you bother to bring your manuscripts down to this awful place? Surely one of those writers' bureaus would do better work, and——"

"Oh, I'd never change from Jessie," came Bart's deep, throaty voice. "She does marvelous work. Why, she typed the very first story I ever sold. She's my little luck girl!"

"Don't be superstitious," scoffed Elva. "There's no such thing as luck. Life gives us just what we go after, and——"

JESSIE, face flaming, closed the door softly and waited till she heard Bart's three staccato raps before opening it.

Elva fluttered in with an arrogant swish of her heavy green silk coat. Everything about Elva was silky: her bright gold hair, her cared-for skin, her soft snakish voice.

"Hello, Jessie," greeted Bart, shaking her hand heartily. "My work finished yet?"

"Yes," smiled Jessie, slipping his work into an envelope.

"These hand-blocked curtains are lovely," regarded Elva. Pivoting on French heels, she swept Jessie's room with critical eyes. "You really have very good taste, excellent taste," she admitted, with a snooty, patronizing air.

"Good taste!" echoed Bart. "Why, Jessie has marvelous taste! And a nose for weak spots in a story, too! And I'm sure no one could understand my wild copy but her. She's——"

"A trained secretary could," cut Elva, thin lips curling. "And after we're married, you'll have to have one, as——"

"Then we'll have to persuade Jessie to be my secretary. I——"

"But Jessie hasn't had a secretarial training," shrugged Elva. "She's merely a typist, and——"

"That's all I am," said Jessie easily. "And any time, Bart, that you feel you want a secretary, by all means, get one. I have more work now than is good for me."

"I have no idea of getting a secretary, Jessie," assured Bart, with a brotherly pat of her shoulder. "Why, no one could make sense of my scribbled margins or x-ed lines but you. And——"

"Oh, do hurry," pouted Elva. "If we're going to get in eighteen holes of golf before tea, we've got to step on it."

"All right, honey," pacified Bart, smiling at Elva tenderly.

He handed Jessie a sheaf of papers. "The next installment of my novel. Can I have it Monday evening?"

"Sure," promised Jessie, a maternal light in her brown eyes.

"Well, so long, Jessie," called Bart, trailing impatient Elva. "We're off for Westchester Country Club. Be good!"

JESSIE watched Bart's taffy-colored head disappear down the stairway. How handsome he was, with his laughing blue eyes and whimsical mouth! There was something vivid about Bart. Where he was things happened—nice things. Even in the darkest moments he always managed to send a spurt of laughter cracking through his blue mood. And he would slap his hat rakishly on his head, thrust out his chin and go after life again.

With a wistful sigh, Jessie stared at the room Elva and Bart had just left. Her heart was in that tiny apartment. It was her seventh heaven. Here Bart and she had struggled over his first story. Back in those pre-fame days Bart had lived in the apartment below. He had come rushing in one night with the check in one hand and a bag of nuts in the other.

"Just imagine, Jess," his blue eyes danced, "$40 for that little story and a bid for more!"

He wedged slabs of cheese between slices of bread and spread the editor's letter before him on Jessie's gateleg table.

"Listen, Jess," he thrilled between mouthfuls, "it says: 'You have that subtle something we demand for our discriminating readers. By all means, let use have a chance at another story.' Can you imagine that, Jessie?" he grinned. "About my story!"

"Why, that was a wonderful story," praised Jessie. "I just loved it. And the idea for your novel is most intriguing. I——"

"Oh, Jess, you would say that!" Bart smiled, and grabbing her in his arms, they danced merrily around the room. And as a fitting finale, Bart kissed the tip of her little nose.

JESSIE was jerked out of her day-dream by a knock at the door. It was Rod Ferris. Rod had Bart's old apartment, played second violin in a cafe at night and studied dentistry in the days.

"Put the cover on the old typewriter and we'll take in a matinee or movie," coaxed Rod.

Rod was short and round and dark, with disappointing blunt fingers. Fingers that had refused to grow into the long, trembling fingers of a virtuoso! So because Rod had bruised dreams, he was sensitive to the bruised dreams of others.

"I can't go out this afternoon, Rod," said Jessie.

"Why not?" frowned Rod. "You're as pale as grass in the shade."

"Really, Rod, I'd love to go. But Bart Welling just brought some work he wants by Monday evening, and——"

"And, like the little fool you are, you'll spend this glorious Saturday afternoon slaving, while he steps out with the Park avenue princess. He's downright selfish, if you ask me! I——"

"No, he isn't!" countered Jessie, red lips quivering with defense. "Bart's the finest chap in the world! Why, I've seen him give a beggar his very last cent, and then go pawn something to buy food for himself. He's just wonderful! And——"

"You're in love with him, that's what," guessed Rod. "Life's queer. Here I am, crazy over you, and you can't see me at all; there you are, living for days on a smile from Bart and all he hears is the brassy chatter of a pampered flapper."

"I am not in love with Bart!" flushed Jessie. "He's just one of my oldest friends, and I'll never go back on him. Why——"

"No, you never will, Jessie," pitied Rod, turning toward the door. "Well, I hope for your sake, Bart has his eyes opened soon and discovers the thin line that separates that friendship of yours from love."

IT WAS one of Jessie's blue days. She had them—oftener of late. For she wasn't seeing so much of Bart now. But she knew why. Knew from the society columns, for Bart's and Elva's names were in the among-those-present group almost every day. And sometimes their pictures were featured, golfing or dancing.

"Oh, every one has something to feel blue about," sighed Jessie, forcing a smile to wistful red lips. "I ought to be thankful I have plenty of work. And I could move farther uptown now, if I wanted to."

She glanced about the rooms that had been her home for four years. They were steeped in memories. It was a homy sort of place, and Rod had helped make it so. He had painted the rusty gas range a verdant green; had built wide sills under the windows, so the plants and goldfish would have sunshine. And when Jessie had discarded the worn Axminster for quaint hooked rugs Rod had polished the floors to a satiny finish. And in the afternoons Rod was always running over the latest music on his violin, while Jessie tapped a merry accompaniment on typewriter keys.

Yes, Rod had been awfully kind—but Bart. * * *

"I'll soon kill this blue mood," frowned Jessie. "I'll play lady."

"Playing lady" meant her fussiest dress, white kid gloves, gardenias in her coat collar and tea at the Plaza. And while Jessie sat and watched the perfumed and pampered daughters of wealth sip tea, for one gilded hour she pretended she was as happy and carefree as any of them.

"But are they happy and carefree?" pondered Jessie, letting her gaze rove over candle-lit tables where slim matrons and their slimmer daughters nibbled daintily of cinnamon toast.

She listened between orchestra lulls to straps of conversation wafted her way. One girl's voice especially caught her ear. It was a beautiful voice, well modulated, with a regal broad a and delicately clipped t's and g's.

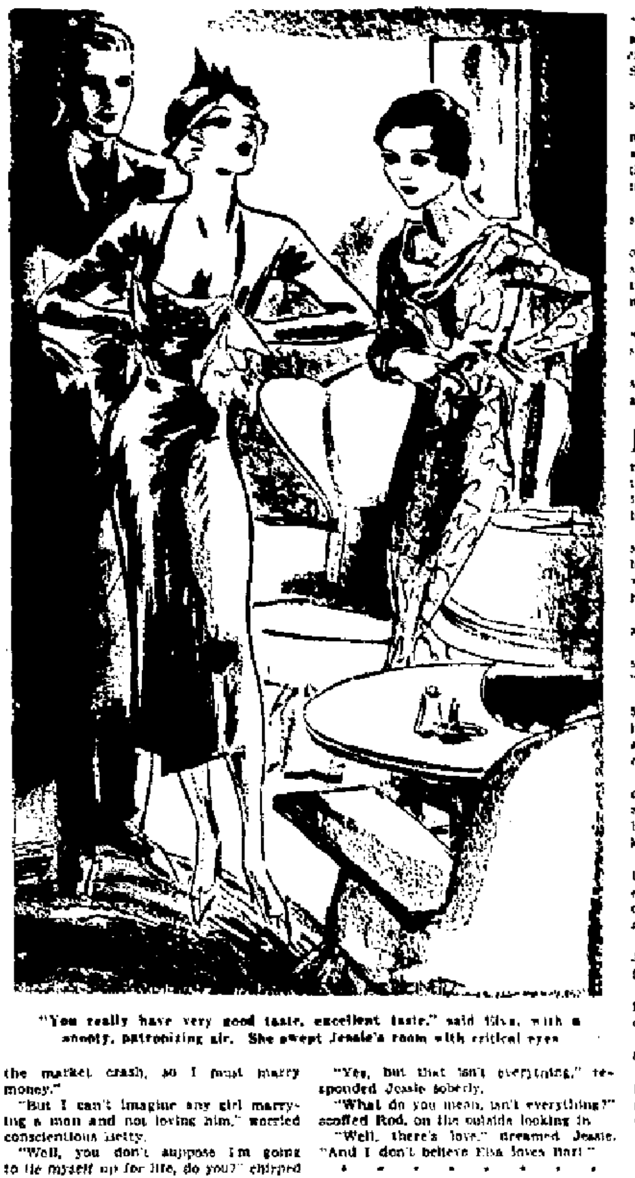
"But, Elva," she chided, "if you don't love this man, how can you marry him?"

ELVA! That name did things to Jessie's heart-strings. She stiffened instinctively, and her shocked ears heard:

"Listen, Betty, I just have to marry money. And Bart's as easy as a kick at a circus, so——"

"But if you don't love him?" puzzled Betty.

"Betty, I'm desperate! Things cannot go on as they are. Mother lost heavily in the market crash, so I must marry money."



"You really have very good taste, excellent taste," said Elva, with a snooty, patronizing air. She swept Jessie's room with critical eyes

"But I can't imagine any girl marrying a man and not loving him," worried conscientious Betty.

"Well, you don't suppose I'm going to tie myself up for life, do you?" chirped Elva. "Indeed not! I'll play Bart along for a while, and when things become too sour, I'll get me a divorce and nail him for some plump alimony."

"Oh, Elva, you can't do that to a man who loves you!"

"Can't I?" challenged Elva, voice brittle. "A girl has to live, doesn't she? And little Elva was never born to work."

"Oh, how cruel! How cruel!" flamed Jessie. "To do this terrible thing to laughing-eyed Bart! But how can I warn him?"

She paid her check, tipped the bowing waiter and arose to go. On her way out she peeped at the table behind her—it was Elva.

Jessie's blue mood deepened with the darkness. Back home she went, as disconsolate as a rainy Easter Sunday.

Rod met her coming up the stairs, noted the white kid gloves and gardenias and dated: "Somebody's been stepping out!" Then, seeing the pained look in Jessie's brown eyes, he teased: "She's all dressed up like a party, but it looks as if some one threw vinegar in the ice cream."

"Oh, Rod, don't tease me," begged Jessie wearily.

Rod, sensing something was amiss, offered: "How about having dinner with me, Jessie?"

"Sorry, Rod. I just had tea at the Plaza."

She opened her door; threw the white kid gloves on the table.

Rod followed Jessie in; stood gazing at her face, bruised with pain like a stepped-on flower. "What's wrong?" he ferreted, jealousy tinging his voice. "Did you run across Bart and the golden lady tea-ing at the Plaza?"

"No."

"You must have met some one who reminded you of Bart, you have a detached air, you——"

"Detached air?"

"Yes, detached air," repeated Rod, shoving his hands into his coat pockets savagely. "You can't fool me, Jessie! You're in love with Bart. Why——"

"Oh, don't be silly, Rod," scoffed Jessie. "You mistake an old friendship for love. You can't realize what Bart and I went through together. We used to share our meals, and he'd buy wood for my grate, and I'd do his mending. And on Sundays——"

"You don't need to tell me, Jessie, what you did for Bart," laughed Rod crisply. "I know. And as soon as Bart began to write best-sellers and pay an income tax, he forgot you for——"

"Stop, Rod! Stop! I won't have you talk so about Bart!"

"No; because you love him!" came back Rod. "And even though you recognize his weaknesses, you won't admit them. Bart climbed the golden road to glory and happiness; then nimbly dropped the hand that helped him over the stubbles of hard times."

"Maybe the path he climbed isn't going to lead to happiness, after all," said Jessie wearily, throwing off her hat.

"And why not?" prodded Rod. "Isn't he marrying into the social register, and isn't she beautiful?"

"Yes, but that isn't everything," responded Jessie soberly.

"What do you mean, isn't everything?" scoffed Rod, on the outside looking in.

"Well, there's love," dreamed Jessie. "And I don't believe Elva loves Bart."

* * * * * * * *

Instead of sending Bart elsewhere for sympathy and companionship when he came to her door one sleety night in early February, Jessie threw a log on the fire, sifted Bart's sleet-misted coat over a chair and hurriedly made a pot of cocoa.

Bart was terribly down. At last it came out: "Elva's gone with Myra Kenton on her father's yacht to Honolulu."

Behind tight lips Jessie managed to hide the hatred of Elva that flamed in her heart. She rolled the teacart near the fire, with its tempting freight of crisp crackers and steaming cocoa.

"Of course, I don't blame Elva for going," Bart defended, lolling back in a wing chair and parking his feet on the grate. "She and Myra went to school together, and this'll be the last time they'll have to hash over old times together."

"The last time?" puzzled Jessie.

"Sure. You see, we're going to be married in April, and Elva won't want to be going away from me after that, so I told her to go. The Kentons are millionaires," he explained, as Jessie refilled his cup. "So I guess she'll have a great time."

"I guess she will," said Jessie, knowing full well that a "great time" was all that mattered to Elva; the love of a good man didn't enter into her scheme of life at all.

JESSIE could always tell when Bart had had a letter from Elva. There was a boyish grin in his lean face, and his deep blue eyes fairly swam with lovelight. Sometimes he read parts of her letters as they sat before Jessie's fire.

While February frosted the houses on Jessie's little street with a crust of crystal snow, Elva was riding surfboards at Waikiki with Dick Kenton.

"Who is Dick Kenton?" asked Jessie, examining the snapshot Elva had inclosed in her letter.

"Dick? Oh, Dick's Myra's older brother. * * * But doesn't Elva remind you of a mermaid, with her golden hair tossed by the breeze, and her wet suit gleaming against her lovely body?"

"Yes, she does," conceded Jessie, handing back the snapshot. "I'm glad she's having a nice time."

"Oh, so am I," nodded Bart, filling his pipe and leaning back in his chair. "It wont be long now till she's back. And that reminds me, I've got to find a new apartment."

"A new apartment? Why your apartment's lovely, Bart. I——"

"It's all right for a bachelor," nodded Bart. "But after I'm married, I'll need more rooms. And I've got to chuck a lot of junk. You know, a bride likes things new and shiny, and some of my things have barnacles on."

"Yes. I guess brides do like new things," sighed Jessie.

She wondered what it must be like to be engaged, to go shopping with the man one loved for furniture for the love nest.

"Just imagine," she dreamed, "marrying the man one loves!"

"And that's what troubles me, Jessie," said Bart, tapping his pipe on the grate.

"I gotta have a woman along to help me select the apartment and furniture. My choice is likely to be anything but bridish. So I thought you'd go along with me."

"But, Bart, I think Elva would rather select her own things."

"But Elva doesn't get back until the middle of April, and I want to get this apartment business cleared up before the wedding, so we can go honeymooning."

"No, Bart, I think you'd better get some one else."

"Why, Elva thinks you have marvelous taste," argued Bart. "In fact, she said you're a fool for spending your life typing when you could make oodles of money in the decorating business."

"Jessie, you've got to help me out," worried Bart. "I'll pay you for your services."

"Oh, Bart, I'll just love helping you," surrendered Jessie, unable to refuse him anything. "But I don't want any pay."

IT WAS strange the way Jessie's free hours seemed to dovetail with Bart's need of them. Or maybe it was because the instant she left him she worked so feverishly that she always had a few hours to spare when he phoned or called.

And as she watched days speed by, she managed to hide the ache in her heart behind a trained smile. No matter what mood Bart was in, she cheered him, for of late he was moody.

"What's wrong, Bart?" asked Jessie anxiously one evening.

"It's the new novel I'm working on," sighed Bart, roughing his hat nervously. "I can't get the ending right."

The next day he came rushing in at 5 o'clock, waving a manuscript. "I have it right at last!" he crowed. "I worked all night. Can you type it right off for me, Jess?"

And while he waited, Bart stretched on Jessie's davenport and instantly fell asleep. When he awakened four hours later, Jessie was tiptoeing round the kitchen getting dinner.

"Jess, you're a good pal," regarded Bart, straddling the kitchen stool. "You always manage to straighten me out. I don't know what I'll do without you after I'm married."

"Oh, Elva will soon fill my place," said Jessie, avoiding Bart's eyes. "You'll forget I ever existed."

"Oh, I'll never forget you," promised Bart. "But Elva is a little princess. I often wonder what she sees in me."

TWELVE o'clock chimed as Jessie closed the door on Bart's departing heels. Down the stairs he ran, and on the first landing he encountered Rod, violin case under one arm.

"Oh, hello, Rod," greeted Bart cheerily.

"'Hullo," grunted Rod, shoving past Bart.

"What's the matter?" asked Bart. "You're not treating me like your bootlegger."

"Why should I?" snapped Rod. "My eyes aren't so pleased at seeing you here, always taking up Jessie's time."

"And is that any of your business?"

"No—oh, it isn't," agreed Rod, biting the mouthpiece of his pipe worriedly, "But you've certainly made a mess of things."

"What do you mean 'mess'?" flamed Bart.

"Well, if you must have it: I love Jessie; Jessie loves you; you love Elva, and Elva doesn't give a hang about any man except the size of his bankroll."

"Indeed! Rod, you're just jealous because you're not in a position to meet girls of Elva's class. If I——"

"Yeah?" snorted Rod. "Well, I don't want even a bowing acquaintance with that little gold-digger."

"Gold-digger! Don't make me laugh! Elva's the finest——"

"Have it your way," shrugged Rod. "But remember, when you find out the truth about Elva, I'll be doing the chuckling."

Bart's blue eyes smiled a pitying smile, and he let Rod past.

IT WAS April. Robins caroled mating songs; brown twigs were green tufted; warm winds teased. Spring bloomed in every heart but Jessie's. Each time she heard Bart's step on the stairs, she held her breath, wondering if it would be the last time.

Then one afternoon he came rushing in. His words fairly flew at her. And in one shaken second she knew her reign was over.

"Jessie," he cried, "can you run over to the apartment for a final inspection? Elva's docking at 4 o'clock."

April fairly laughed that day! And, as Jessie walked along with good-looking Bart, she tried to squeeze every drop of joy out of the last hours she would ever have with him alone.

Silently they hurried to the towering apartment house where Bart and Elva were to live. Next door, another sky-scraper was going up. Men scampered like monkeys across its red iron skeleton, guiding blocks of stone into place from a clattering derrick.

Jessie and Bart stepped under the metal canopy erected to protect pedestrians. Just as they did, the workmen below shrieked and bolted for the opposite side of the street.

Jessie knew some terrible thing was going to happen—and it must not happen to Bart. He was too fine, and his marriage might turn out all right. With a violent shove, she pushed Bart down the cellar that yawned beside them. Instantly, she heard a wicked, ripping, crashing sound—then knew no more.

Jessie's brown eyes opened slowly. It was night, and the light from a parchment-shaded night lamp was diffused on the surface of a maple dresser. She was at home in bed. And a queer contraption was arranged over the bedcovers.

Then her clouded brain cleared and she remembered.

She called weakly: "Is that you, Bart?"

Rod tiptoed in; leaned over her tenderly, brushed back a lock of hair that caressed her damp brow.

"Why, it's Rod!" said Jessie, surprised. "Why didn't they take me to a hospital?"

"Because I didn't want you to go to a hospital."

"You didn't? Where's Bart? Is he hurt much?"

"Not even scratched. He had to meet Elva."

"Oh!" Jessie's face paled. "How did you get up there?"

"Well, the orchestra leader in Bart's new apartment house advertised for a second violinist to play dinner music. And, as time's been hanging pretty heavily on my hands of late, I decided I might as well try for it. As luck would have it, I was on the spot two minutes after that stone crashed."

"Am I hurt badly, Rod?"

"Only a broken leg, thank God," breathed Rod. "A stone fell from the tenth floor of that apartment house and missed you by inches, but a stud got your leg. Have you much pain?"

"Not a bit," said Jessie, trying to read Rod's worried eyes.

"Tell me the truth about Bart," she coaxed, stroking his hand.

"I did tell you. He had to meet Elva. I told him to run along, that I'd take care of you. Then a doctor in the crowd said only your leg was broken—so I called a taxi and brought you home." Rod patted the hand he held tenderly. "The doctor said you wouldn't need a trained nurse, and recommended a Mrs. Dunn, a practical nurse. So I got her. She'll do everything."

"You're so good, Rod," murmured Jessie, closing tired eyes.

Rod, thinking she wished to sleep, slipped away. But Jessie wanted to think. Was Bart hurt? Had Rod told her the truth?

HOW the days dragged! Mrs. Dunn was a sociable creature, but Jessie was in no mood to talk. She was sure Bart was hurt—probably in a hospital. It seemed to her that Rod was avoiding her eyes. He was always dropping in at odd moments, and never empty-handed. He brought roasted chickens for Mrs. Dunn to heat up; delicious fruits, flowers, papers and magazines.

And he'd stand at the foot of the bed, his soulful eyes searching Jessie's, trying to divine her slightest wish.

"And he knows all the time that I want to hear about Bart," Jessie fumed petulantly. "If only I'd hear something!"

Rod came in rather sheepishly late one afternoon, and, with a careless gesture, tossed Jessie the afternoon paper. Its ragged condition aroused her suspicions, and she searched through it eagerly—to find the society page missing.

"Where's the society page?" she demanded, giving Rod a withering glance. "Rod, you're as clear as spring water. Hand over that page; I want to see how Elva looked as a bride."

"Ah, Jessie, what do you want to look for?" appealed Rod, relinquishing the paper with a sigh.

Jessie soon found what she sought: A picture of Elva in trailing veil, walking down the steps of St. Thomas' Church, with Bart by her side, gazing down at her with adoring eyes.

Jessie flung the paper from her and buried her face in her arms. Deep sobs racked her slender body.

"Don't, Jessie, don't!" begged Rod, cradling her brown head against his heart. "I tried to save you this, but you——"

"But I wouldn't listen! Wouldn't believe Bart was so selfish," sobbed Jessie. She raised her face and studied Rod's dream-bruised eyes, the gentle lips. "Well, we'll never have to face the terrible disillusioning Bart will."

"We?" puzzled Rod, switching unbelieving lips.

"Yes, we," repeated Jessie, nestling close.

"But you can't mean, Jessie, that you love me? Me?" cried Rod, humility and pride husking his voice.

"I do, Rod."

"Then why the tears?" doubted Rod.

"Oh, I was just washing away a bad memory," smiled Jessie. "Something had to clear my vision, to let me see how wonderful you are."

"JESSIE!" Rod held her close, pressed kiss after kiss on her surrendering lips. "I'll be good to you," he promised, eyes misting with dreams. "June will soon be here; I'll graduate, and we'll be married. Then we'll find a little home in the suburbs, and I'll hang out the old shingle, and——"

"A home of our own, Rod?" asked home-loving Jessie.

"A home of our own, dear," nodded Rod tenderly. "One with a friendly fireplace with a long shelf for Christmas stockings!"

"And on our first Christmas," dreamed Jessie, falling into his mood, "we'll have colored lights on the little spruce tree by the holly-hung door."

"And on our second Christmas," thrilled Rod, pressing his face against Jessie's soft cheek, "maybe there'll be a tiny little stocking and chugging trains beneath a Christmas tree."

"Maybe there will," breathed Jessie, gazing into the happy future. "And by that time poor Bart's marriage will have gone rusty, and he'll start looking me up, and——"

"And I'll be able to show him what he missed," triumphed Rod, "when he passed up the luck girl."
